PREFACE.

In the text of this edition we have followed the MSS, rather than the emendations of editors, unless there seemed to be weighty reasons to the contrary. In the absence, however, of A, the testimony of Donatus or other Scholiasts as to readings earlier than those in the Calliopian MSS, has been sometimes accepted, when supported by intrinsic probability.

In a School edition we have thought it better to print the letter v, and to adopt the modernised spelling of the MSS., except in a few cases where the orthography in Terence's time was demonstrably different: e.g. o is substituted for u after another u or v; quor, quoius, quoi, adpulit, etc., appear for cur, cuius, cui, appulit, etc., and -is for -cs in the accusative plural of such words of the third declension as make the genitive plural in -ium.

It is hoped that the stage directions, which have been mainly suggested by practical experience at Westminster, may be of real service. As our opportunities of studying this aspect of the Play are unique, we have endeavoured to make this part of the edition as complete as pessible.

We have made constant use of the editions of Umpfenbach, Fleckeisen, R. Klotz, A. Spengel, Meissner, and Wagner,—the first two on textual questions only,—and have occasionally referred to those of Bentley, Zeune (containing the commentaries of Donatus), Stallbaum, Parry, and Papillon.

INTRODUCTION.

ROMAN COMEDY AND TERENCE.

First beginnings of Dramatic Representations at Rome. The natural bent of the Roman character was too serious and too prosaic to favour the growth of a national drama. More than five hundred years had elapsed since the foundation of the city, before a play of any kind was produced on the Roman stage, and even then it was but a rude adaptation by a foreign author of a foreign work.

Fescennine Verses. Yet there had long existed the germs whence a drama might, under other circumstances, have sprung. The unrestrained merriment of the harvest-home at time of vintage found expression, in Latium as in Greece, in extemporised dialogues more or less metrical in character, and much more than less coarse in expression. The lively genius of the Greeks had from such rude beginnings developed a regular Comedy as early as the sixth century B.C. But, among the Romans, although these rustic effusions were at a very early date sufficiently well established to receive a definite name, Carmina Fescennina, from Fescennia, a town in Etruria; yet they never rose above gross personalities and outrageous scurrility. When this license was checked by a stringent clause in the Laws of the Twelve Tables, the Fescennine verses became merely a generic name for improvised songs, not always very refined, at weddings, triumphs, or other festal occasions.

Saturae. According to Livy 7. 2, the first 'ludi scenici' were introduced at Rome 361 B.C. to appease the anger of the gods who had sent a pestilence on the city.

It seems certain that about this time a stage was erected in the Circus at the Ludi Maximi, and the first three days of the festival were henceforth occupied with recitations, music, and dancing. Performers from Etruria, called Iudiones, danced to the music of the flute without words or descriptive action; but the strolling minstrels of Latium (grassatores, spatiatores) soon took advantage of the stage to recite their chants with appropriate music and gesture. These performances were named from their miscellaneous character Saturae¹. They were composed in the rugged Saturnian metre, with no connected plot, and did not admit of dialogue.

Fabulae Atellanae. A nearer approach to dramatic form was made in the Fabulae Atellanae, broad farces with stock characters, e. g. Maccus, Pappus, Bucco, and Dossenus, analogous to the clown, pantaloon, and harlequin of an English pantomime. Each character had its traditional mask, and the pieces were originally played only by amateurs at private theatricals; but when translations from Greek dramas had monopolised the Roman stage, the Atellan farce was adopted as an after-piece, like the Satyric drama among the Greeks, and was regularly performed by professional actors. The name Atellanae, from Atella, an Oscan town near Capua, gave rise to the erroneous supposition that these farces were performed at Rome in the Oscan dialect; whereas it was only in accordance with Roman custom to give to dramatic performances a local name which could offend no national prejudices. The records of these plays are scanty, but they appear to have presented extravagant caricatures of special classes, trades, or occurrences, and their grotesque situations and lively humour secured them a lasting place in popular favour.

Laws regulating Dramatic Performances. The failure of the Romans to produce a national drama was due not only to their national 'gravity' but also to the rigid censorship of the laws. Any personal lampoon, any ill-advised criticism of public affairs, met with summary chastisement. Fuste feritor was the laconic edict of the Twelve Tables: and the magistrates seem to have had plenary power to scourge any actor at any time or place that they deemed fit.

Public opinion at Rome. To legal harshness was added a moral stigma. No Roman citizen could venture to appear on a public stage without losing his character for ever. The composition and performance of plays were handed over entirely to freedmen and slaves, who did not dare to represent Roman life, or introduce Roman topics. Even the rustic raillery and amateur farces of early Rome had to lay their scene in Tuscan Fescennia or Oscan Atella.

Contact with Greek civilisation. Moreover, in addition to a national deficiency of literary instinct, and ignominious legal penalties, a third cause had operated powerfully in checking any development of dramatic originality. For nearly five centuries the Romans had been engaged in a varying, yet almost ceaseless struggle for supremacy, or even for existence. The defeat of Pyrrhus, 274 B. C., and the final conquest of Tarentum and the other cities of Magna Graecia a few years later, left them undisputed masters of the whole peninsula. They were thus brought into close contact with Greek civilisation at the very moment when they had leisure to attend to it. There began at once to arise an ever-increasing demand for a better education for the Roman youth, and for more varied amusements for the Roman populace. The satisfaction of these demands was delayed by the First Punic War, 264-241 B.C.

Livius Andronicus. In the next year Livius Andronicus, a Tarentine captive who received his freedom for educating the sons of Livius Salinator, produced on the Roman stage ¹ a drama translated from the Greek. He also translated the Odyssey into Saturnian verse as a school-room text-book, which was still in use in the boyhood of Horace². Thus at Rome the beginnings both of Epic and Dramatic poetry were due not so much to poetical inspiration as to the needs of the school-room and the Circus. As might be expected in work thus done to order, there was little artistic merit. The few fragments which remain seem crude and barbarous, and we may well believe that the books were never again opened when the rod of an Orbilius was no longer dreaded.

Old Athenian Comedy. There could be no doubt as to the school of Attic Comedy to be chosen for imitation. The Old Comedy of Eupolis, Cratinus or Aristophanes, essentially political in its subjects, abounding in topical allusions and trenchant satire of public men and public matters, could not have been reproduced on a Roman stage.

Middle Comedy. Even the poets of the Middle Comedy, who satirised classes rather than individuals or travestied schools of philosophy, would have seemed far too free to the stern censors of the Republic, and would have been almost unintelligible to the majority of Romans.

New Comedy. The New Comedy was alone available. This was the name given to a school of dramatists, of whom the best known are Philemon, Diphilus, Apollodorus of Carystus, and above all Menander. They wrote at a period (340-260 B.C.) when the power of Macedon had crushed the liberty of Grecce. Political life was dead; social life was idle and corrupt. The natural products of such a period of decay were the 'Society' plays of the New Comedy. Their aim was merely to give amusing sketches of every day life 1. The savage satire of Aristophanes only survived in good-humoured banter. The keen strife of Conservatism against Democracy was replaced by intrigues of amorous youths or crafty slaves to out-wit the head of the family. The interest of these plays was not local but cosmopolitan. Human nature is pretty much the same in all ages, and so these plays were naturally suited for the Roman stage. They were amusing, without the slightest tendency to criticise points of national interest, or otherwise offend against the strict regulations of the Roman magistrates.

Cn. Naevius, 235–204 B.C., the first imitator of Livius Andronicus, a Campanian of great ability and force of character, did indeed dare to write with something of Aristophanic freedom. But his temerity in assailing the haughty Metelli, and even the mighty Africanus himself, led first to imprisonment and afterwards to banishment. The experiment was not repeated.

Plautus and Terence. Between 230 and 160 B.C. the writers of Comedy were fairly numerous², but only two have bequeathed to posterity more than scattered fragments. These two are Titus Maccius Plautus and Publius Terentius Afer.

Life and Works of Terence. Plautus died in 184 B.C. Terence was born in 195 B. C. at Carthage, whence his cognomen 'Afer.' He was a slave, but must early have shown signs of ability for his master Terentius Lucanus gave him a good education, and before long his freedom. His talents gained him admission to the literary clique, known as the Scipionic circle, the fashionable representatives of the new Hellenic culture. Scipio Aemilianus was the centre of the coterie, which included Laelius and Furius Philo, Sulpicius Gallus, Q. Fabius Labeo, M. Popillius, the philosopher Panaetius, and the historian Polybius. These being men of education and taste, unreservedly recognised the immeasurable superiority of Greek literature as compared with the rude efforts of their native writers. To present to a Roman audience a faithful reproduction of the best Hellenic models, in pure and polished Latin, seemed to them the ideal of literary excellence. Style was more valued than strength, correctness of form more than originality of thought. Such was the literary atmosphere which Terence breathed; and his enemies, not confining themselves to gross aspersions on his moral character, openly affirmed that the plays produced under his name were really the work of his distinguished patrons. How far Scipio or Laelius may have had some hand in his plays can never be known, Terence at any rate did not care to refute the report which doubtless flattered his noble friends, but rather prided himself on the intimacy and approbation of so select a circle 1. All the plays of Terence,

Nam quod isti dicunt malevoli, homines nobilis
Eum adiutare adsidueque una scribere;
Quod illi maledictum vemens esse existumant,
Eam laudem hic ducit maximam, quom illis placet,
Qui vobis univorsis et populo placent,
Quorum opera in bello, in otio, in negotio

Adelphi Prol. 15-21.

as of Plautus, were Comoediae palliatae, i. e. plays wherein the scene and characters are Greek, as opposed to Comoediae togatae, where the scene is laid in Rome or at least in Italy. Praetextatae was a name given to historic or tragic plays.

Terence's first comedy, the Andria, was produced 166 B.C. Suetonius relates that when this play was offered to the Aediles. the young author was told to submit it to the judgment of Caecilius. Terence arrived when the veteran poet was at supper, and being in mean attire was seated on a stool near the table. But he had read no more than a few lines, when Caecilius bade him take a place upon his couch, and bestowed high commendation on the play. As Caecilius died in 168 B.C., the Andria must have been in manuscript at least two years before its performance, and some colour is given to the above anecdote by the mention which Terence makes in the Prologue of the illnatured criticisms of Luscius Lanuvinus. The Hecyra, his second play, proved his least successful one. At its first performance in 165 B. C., the audience deserted the theatre to look at some boxers; a similar fate attended a second representation in 160 B.C., and only the personal intercession of the manager. Ambivius Turpio, secured it a hearing at all. The Hauton Timorumenos appeared in 163, the Eunuchus and Phormio in 161, the Adelphi in 160. In the same year Terence visited Greece, either to study for himself Athenian manners and customs, or, as some assert, to escape the persecution of his enemies. According to one account 1 he perished by shipwreck in 159 B. C., as he was returning to Italy with no less than 108 of Menander's comedies translated into Latin. A more general belief was that he died at Stymphalus, in Arcadia, from grief on hearing of the loss of his MSS., which he had sent on before him by sea. Porcius Licinus narrates that his noble patrons suffered him to die in such abject poverty that he had not even a lodging at Rome whither a slave might have brought news of his death. This is probably untrue, for Suetonius writes that he left gardens of twenty jugera in extent on the Appian Way, and his daughter afterwards married a Roman knight.

In personal appearance Terence is said to have been of middle height, with a slight figure and reddish-brown hair. Of his character we know nothing, save what can be gathered from his prologues. These indicate a lack of independence and confidence. He evidently feels that he is not a popular poet. He never professes to be more than an adapter from Greek models; imitation, not creation, was the object of his art.

Contrast of Plautus and Terence. This sensitive protégé of patrician patrons has none of the vigorous personality of Plautus. Indeed, though the literary activity of the two poets is only separated by a single generation, their works belong to different epochs of literature. Plautus wrote for the people, he aimed at the broad effect on the stage, his fun was natural and not unfrequently boisterous. Circumstances forced him to adapt foreign plays and lay his scenes in foreign cities, but he was not careful to disguise his true nationality, and freely introduced Roman names, allusions, and customs wherever they might contribute to the dramatic effect on the heterogeneous audience which crowded to the gratuitous entertainments of a Roman holiday.

Between such plays and the polished productions of Terence there is a world of difference. Terence sought the approbation, not of the uncultured masses, but of a select circle of literary men. His highest aim was to produce in the purest Latin a perfect representation of the comedies of Menander and his school. His cardinal virtues, as a writer, were correctness of language and consistency of character. His scene is always laid at Athens, and not once in his six plays is to be found an allusion which is distinctively Roman. Indeed, the whole tone of his writings was cosmopolitan. Human nature, under the somewhat common-place conditions of every-day life in a civilised community, was his subject; Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto, was his motto. His plays breathe a spirit of broad-minded liberality, and their simple unaffected style, the easy yet pointed dialogue, the terse and dramatic descriptions, and the admirable delicacy of the pourtrayal of character, won for Terence from the cultured taste of the Augustan age a more favourable verdict than he could have expected from the rude and unlettered masses who most enjoyed the broad fun of a boisterous farce. The above characteristics secured for Terence considerable attention at the Renaissance in Europe. In England several of the minor dramatists are under obligations to him, while in France his influence profoundly affected Molière, and is in no small degree responsible for the long-continued servitude of the French drama to the 'unities' of time and place which have so cramped its free development. The Andria has been adapted to the French stage by Baron as L'Andrienne, while Sir Richard Steele has presented it in an English dress as The Conscious Lovers.

As might be expected, the characters in Terence, though admirably drawn, are rather commonplace. No personality in his plays stands out in the memory like that of Tyndarus in the Captivi, or Stasimus in the Trinummus. His morality does not rise above a conventional respectability and a civilised consideration for others, except where the natural impulses inspire a generous disposition with something of nobility.

The discerning criticism of Caesar nearly expresses the more matured judgment of modern times:

Cicero writes:

Horace, Ep. 2. 1. 59, records the general verdict:

dicitur . . .

Vincere Caecilius gravitate, Terentius arte.

Volcatius, on the other hand, places Terence below Naevius, Plautus, Caecilius, Licinius, and Atilius.

^{&#}x27;Terentio non similem dices quempiam?

^{&#}x27;Tu quoque, qui solus lecto sermone, Terenti, Conversum expressumque Latina voce Menandrum In medium nobis sedatis vocibus effers, Quidquid come loquens atque omnia dulcia dicens.'

Tu quoque, tu in summis, O dimidiate Menander, Poneris et merito, puri sermonis amator. Lenibus atque utinam scriptis adiuncta foret vis Comica, ut aequato virtus polleret honore Cum Graccis, neque in hac despectus parte iaceres; Unum hoc maceror ac dolco tibi deesse, Terenti.

Not that Terence was devoid of humour; but his humour is so delicate and refined that it must often have fallen flat upon the stage. When his plays are well known their subtile satire and polished wit can be appreciated; but there is without doubt an absence of energy and action (Caesar's vis comica), which prevented his pieces from being dramatically successful. An audience must be educated up to his plays before it can perceive their many excellences.

PLOT OF THE ANDRIA.

The Andria takes its name from the Andrian woman, Glycerium, with whose history and fortunes the action of the Play is largely concerned. The familiar characters of the Latin Comedy appear on the stage, the respectable father, the amorous son, and the intriguing slave.

Many years before the time at which the story is supposed to begin, Chremes, an Athenian citizen, having to make a voyage to Asia, left his daughter Pasiphila under the care of his brother Phania. In consequence of a threatened war (936) the latter took Pasiphila with him and followed his brother, but was shipwrecked on the island of Andros (924), and, being in want, made himself the client of an Andrian citizen, who on Phania's death adopted Pasiphila, changed her name to Glycerium, and brought her up with his own daughter Chrysis (810). Presently this man died, and the two girls went to Athens, where Pamphilus, son of Simo, fell in love with Glycerium. This Pamphilus seems to have been considered a model young man; and Simo, without asking his son's consent, had already made arrangements for his marriage with Philumena, another daughter of Chremes, born since the loss of Glycerium. prospect of this match was marred by an accident. Chrysis died, and, when her body was being burned, Glycerium went dangerously near the fire; Pamphilus rushed forward to save her, and a scene followed, which showed clearly enough how Chremes, on hearing what had happened, matters stood. declared that he would not allow his daughter to marry such a man as Pamphilus.

Act I. Sc. 1. The Play begins with a dialogue, in which Simo informs his freedman Sosia of the early life of Pamphilus, his engagement to Philumena, the discovery of his passion for Glycerium, and the consequent breaking off of the match; he is determined nevertheless to make Pamphilus believe that the marriage between him and Philumena is to take place after all, chiefly in order to see what his son will do.

- Act I. Sc. 2, 3. Thus the first scene makes the position of affairs sufficiently clear to the audience. Next Davos appears, anxious to help the son against the father, but afraid of the consequences to himself. Simo threatens him with the severest penalties, if he hinders the marriage with Philumena.
- Act I. Sc. 4, 5. Pamphilus enters, complaining bitterly of the heartless conduct of his father, who has just met him, and told him that he is to be married at once. Mysis, Glycerium's maid, overhears his soliloquy, and urges him to be faithful to her mistress.
- Act II. Sc. 1, 2. The second act introduces Charinus, who is in love with Philumena, and is reduced to despair, when he hears from his slave Byrria, that she is to marry Pamphilus; but Davos revives the spirits of both the young men, by the discovery that the marriage is not seriously contemplated.
- Act II. Sc. 3, 4, 5, 6. Pamphilus, by the advice of Davos, tells his father that he is ready to marry Philumena, feeling confident that he can make this promise without danger, as Chremes will persist in his refusal.
- Act III. Sc. 1, 2. At the beginning of the third act a child is born to Pamphilus and Glycerium; but Simo, who prides himself on his acuteness, believes, and is encouraged by Davos to believe, that this is a mere pretence, intended to prevent Chremes from allowing his daughter's marriage.
- Act III. Sc. 3, 4, 5, Act IV. Sc. 1. Chremes, knowing nothing about the baby, is persuaded once more to agree to the marriage. Davos is terrified at this fatal blow to his scheme, Pamphilus is enraged against Davos, and Charinus against Pamphilus; but Pamphilus (Act IV. Sc. 1, 2) declares that he never meant to give his consent seriously, and Davos promises to find some way out of the difficulty.
- Act IV. Sc. 3, 4, Act V. Sc. 1. He hopes to do this by convincing Chremes that the child really has been born; and accordingly he persuades Mysis to lay it before Simo's door, and, in an amusing dialogue, which Chremes is purposely allowed to hear, he makes her tell him that Pamphilus is the father. This piece of information has the desired effect; Chremes declares that the match must be given up.

Act IV. Sc. 5. However, matters cannot come right, unless it is proved that Glycerium is a respectable wife for Pamphilus; and a deus ex machina is provided in the person of the Andrian Crito, cousin of Chrysis, who suddenly appears and is introduced into Glycerium's house.

Act V. Sc. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. Soon afterwards Davos comes out, and tells the old men, on the authority of Crito, that Glycerium is an 'Athenian citizen.' Simo, believing this to be a lie, summarily sends the slave off to prison, and is bitterly reproaching Pamphilus, when Crito comes out of the house, and explains everything satisfactorily. Pamphilus is made happy, but the fortunes of Charinus do not seem to have been very interesting to Terence, unless we can accept the second ending as genuine.

METRES AND PROSODY.

The object of this Introduction is to explain briefly the metres employed by Terence in the Andria, and to clear up such apparent difficulties of Prosody as may remain after the general scheme of the metres is understood.

These metres are Iambic, Trochaic, Bacchiac, Dactylic, and Cretic, which receive their names from being composed of iambi, trochees, etc., as the case may be, or of some other feet, considered to be equivalent; and the lines are further subdivided according to the number of metres which they contain, and according to their complete or incomplete form. In iambic and trochaic lines a series of two feet is called a metre (or dipodia), and the name of the line corresponds to the number of these metres; thus an iambic trimeter is an iambic line, containing three metres or six feet; a trochaic tetrameter is a trochaic line, containing four metres or eight feet. In the other lines, however, i. e. bacchiac, dactylic, and cretic, each separate foot is called a metre. Again, some lines have a number of complete feet; these are called acatalectic; while others are called catalectic, because the last foot is incomplete. Thus a trochaic tetrameter catalectic is a trochaic line of four metres or eight feet, wanting the last syllable, and really containing only seven feet and a half.

I. IAMBIC.

- (1) Iambic Tetrameter Acatalectic, called Octonarius, from its eight complete feet. (Common.)
- (b) Iambic Tetrameter Cataleetic, called Septenarius, from its seven complete feet. (Less common.)
- (c) Iambie Trimeter Acatalectic, or Senarius. (Very common; all the plays of Terence begin with it.)
- (d) Iambic Dimeter Acatalectic, or Quaternarius. (Used occasionally.)
 - (e) Iambic Dimeter Catalectic. (Rare; in 485.)

These lines consist in their pure form of iambi; but the spondee, tribrach, anapaest, and dactyl are admitted in all feet except the last, which must be an iambus, unless, of course, the verse is catalectic. Moreover, as the Tetrameter is regarded as being composed of two verses, with the division after the fourth foot, that foot is usually an iambus; and such words as ego, tibi, ccdo (cf. 702, 703, 705), are allowed to stand there as if at the end of a senarius.

II. TROCHAIC.

- (a) Trochaic Tetrameter Acatalectic, or Octonarius. (Not common.)
- (b) Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic, or Septenarius. (Very common.)
 - (c) Trochaic Dimeter Catalectic. (246, 517.)

These lines consist in their pure form of trochees; the spondee, tribrach, anapaest, and dactyl are also admitted. But only the trochee, tribrach, and sometimes dactyl are found in the seventh foot of the Septenarius; and the eighth foot of the Octonarius is always a trochee or spondee. Trochaic, like Iambic Tetrameters, are considered to be divided after the fourth foot. As the Trochaic metre is more quick and lively than the Iambic, it is naturally employed in scenes where feeling and excitement are represented. In any of the metres above mentioned the spondee is occasionally resolved into a Proceleusmatic (OCCO). Cf. 46, 134, 261, 610, 691, 737, 745, 759, 779.

III. OTHER METRES.

- (1) Bacchiae Tetrameter Acatalectic, i. e. four complete bacchii $(\omega -)$. 481-484.
- (b) Dactylic Tetrameter Acatalectic, i. e. four complete dactyls (-00). 625.
- (c) Cretic Tetrameter Acatalectic, i. e. four complete cretics (-v-). 626-634 and 637.

635 is an irregular line, apparently made up of two trochaic dipodiae catalectic.

The rules of prosody, as commonly taught, must be considerably modified, if we are to understand the scansion of Plautus and Terence. It must always be remembered that the poets of the late days of the Republic and their successors were writing in a literary language, not in the language of everyday life. The quantity of any syllable was regarded as rigidly fixed, just as we might find it marked in a dictionary. In reading the comic poets we find that not merely the word itself, but its relation to other words is important. We have to consider accent as well as quantity; for a remarkable instance cf. 760, where we find manē, cavē. The chief points, which should be noticed, are given below. For the sake of brevity illustrations are taken from the Andria only; but it must be understood that no assertion is made which cannot be supported by citations from Terence.

- I. Shortening of syllables usually regarded as long.
- 1. Shortening of vowels naturally long. This takes place with the final vowel of dissyllabic words:—
- (a) When the first syllable is short and accented; common in the case of imperatives; e. g. 300 $\epsilon dv \dot{e}$, and so some scan 255 $\dot{e}\dot{e}\dot{e}$. Wagner expresses this in a formula, $\dot{e} = 0$.
- (b) Before a long accented syllable, so that 0-2=002; e.g. 403 carvě te ésse, 682 maně cóncrepuit, 760 carvě quóquam.
 - 2. Shortening of syllables long by position :-
 - (a) By dropping or slurring final consonants.
 - m, 91 enim vero, 503 certo enim scio.
 - s, 262 patris pudor, 308 magis lubido, 412 crüs me, 651 meüs carnufex, 673 satis credo.
 - r, 261 amor misericordia, 301 daturne illa.
 - t. 396 dabit nemo.
 - a, 302, 745 apăd forum, and perhaps 408 apăd te ut.
 - n, 271 egŏn propter, 399 ităn credis, 504 egŏn te, 749 satīn sanus, 803 ităn Chrysis.

So, too, l, x, and even nt. Monosyllables are very commonly shortened, e. g. 42 ĭd gratum, 237 quid ĕst si haec, 462 sed hĭc Pamphilus, 480 ego ĭn portu, 708 ego hănc visam.

- (b) By indifference to double consonants, which Terence probably did not write. Thus ille is often used as a pyrrhic, and the first syllable of omnis is scanned short (694); for mn = nn in pronunciation. So 378 ipsus sibi čsse.
- (c) By weakening consonants of unaccented syllables, when an accented syllable immediately precedes, e. g. 225 quidem hĕrcle, or immediately follows, e. g. 66 sine ĭnvidia, 466 bonum ingénium, 614 quidem ătque id ago, 830 átque in ĭncértas, 944 volŭptáti. The first syllable of iste and ipse is often short; cf. 174, 645. Note that in 242, 510, 781 suam, tuam, cam probably suffer elision of both vowels, though we may elide the last only, and scan ixorem, isse, as already explained.

- II. Retention of the quantity of final vowels originally long. This is much less common in Terence than in Plautus. Many instances given by Wagner are not certain. Probably this retention takes place only when it is helped by a pause, e.g. 437 potin cs mi verum dicerē.
- III. Synizesis. Most dissyllabic words, in which no consonant separates the vowels, may be treated as monosyllables; e. g. 95 scias, 843 meo, 296 tuae, 880 sui, 210 huius, 93, 210 eius, 765 quoius; and so eorum, meorum, &c. grandītiscula (814) is noticeable, if it is the right reading. dehine and proin are always monosyllabic in Terence. In 202 circuitione seems to scan as circitione, cu apparently being regarded as = qu.

Hiatus is admitted :-

- (1) When there is a change of speaker, e.g. 616, 665.
- (2) When a line is broken by a strong pause, e.g. 345.
- (3) When a word is isolated by the sense, e. g. 264 incertum.
- (4) After the fourth foot of an Iambic or Trochaic Tetrameter.

It is hardly necessary to note that the interjection O is not elided before vowels, e.g. 769, 817; nor is cm, cf. 604.

Occasionally a long vowel is shortened instead of being elided, e. g. 191 qu' amant. Cf. Verg. Ecl. 8. 108 an qu' amant.

CODICES OF TERENCE.

The MSS. of Terence fall into two classes. Class I is before the recension of Calliopius, Class II after it. Class II is arranged in probable order of antiquity.

Name of Codex.

BEMBINUS

Vatican.

On parchment in uncial

The Bembine is by far the most important, not merely on account of its antiquity, but because it alone has escaped the recension of Calliopius in the seventh century. Codex A was in bad condition, as its owner Cardinal Bembo testified before the end of the fifteenth century, and Andria I–786 is now entirely wanting.

It bears a note written by Politian (1493 A. D.) to the effect that he never saw so old a Codex. The hands of two correctors can be discerned: one of ancient date, which only appears twice in the Andria, one about the fifteenth century, which changed and added characters in a 'downright shameless fashion.' But, where not thus tampered with, Codex A possesses an authority sufficient to outweigh all the other MSS. taken together. The later MSS. were so much altered by the Calliopian recension that their independent authority is not very great. In all MSS., even in A, the spelling has been much modernised.

The evidence of the MSS. is to some small extent supplemented by quotations of ancient writers and the commentaries of grammarians.

Of these latter, the most important is Aelius Donatus, tutor of St. Jerome, about 350 A.D., and author of a celebrated grammatical treatise which became the common text-book of mediaeval schools. Priscian (480? A.D.), Servius (about 420 A.D.) in his notes on Vergil, and other more obscure scholiasts are of occasional service.

SC. 2.

LESBIA. SIMO. DAVOS.

(Lesbia, coming out of Glycerium's house, speaks through the door to Archilis, who is within. Simo and Davos are at the back of the stage.)

LE. Adhúc, Archilís, quae adsolént quaeque opórtet Signa ésse ad salútem, omnia huíc esse vídeo. Nunc prímum fac ísta ut lavét: post dëínde, Quod iússi ei darí bibere et quántum inperávi,

Date: móx ego huc revórtar. 5 485

(Turning to the audience.) Per ecástor scitus púer est natus Pámphilo.

Deos quaéso ut sit supérstes, quandoquidem ípsest ingenió bono,

Quomque huíc est veritus óptumae adulescénti facere iniúriam. (Exit Lesbia.)

- SI. (Angrily.) Vel hoc quis non credat, qui te norit, abs te esse ortum? DA. (With affected astonishment.)

 Ouid nam id est?
- SI. Non inperabat córam, quid opus fácto esset puérperae: 10 490

Sed póstquam egressast, íllis quae sunt íntus clamat dé via. O Dáve, itan contémnor abs te? aut ítane tandem idóneus Tibi vídeor esse, quém tam aperte fállere incipiás dolis?

Saltem áccurate, ut métui videar cérte, si rescíverim.

DA. (Aside.) Certe hércle nunc hic se ípsus fallit, haúd ego. SI. Edixín tibi, 15 495 Intérminatus súm, ne faceres: núm veritu's? quid rétulit?

Credón tibi hoc nunc, péperisse hanc e Pámphilo?

- Id égo iam nunc tibi, ére, renuntió futurum, ut sís sciens,

Ne tu hóc posterius dícas Davi fáctum consilio aút dolis: Prórsus a me opínionem hanc tuam ésse ego amotám volo. 30 510

SI. (Incredulously.) Ýnde id scis? DA. Audívi et credo: (Confidentially.) múlta concurrúnt simul,

Quí coniecturam hánc nunc facio. iám primum postquám videt

Núptias domi ádparari, míssast ancilla ílico

Óbstetricem arcéssitum ad eam et púerum ut adferrét simul. 35 515

Hóc nisi fit, puerum út tu videas, níl moventur núptiae.

SI. Quíd aïs? quom intelléxeras

Íd consilium cápere, quor non díxti extemplo Pámphilo?

DA. Quís igitur eum ab ílla abstraxit nísi ego? nam omnes nós quidem

Scímus, quam misere hánc amarit. núnc sibi uxorem éxpetit. 40 520

Póstremo id mihi dá negoti: tú tamen idem has núptias Pérge facere ita út facis: et id spéro adiuturós deos.

SI. Ímmo abi intro: ibi me ópperire et quód parato opus ést para. (Exit Davos into Simo's house.)

Non inpulit me, haec núnc omnino ut créderem.

Atque haúd scio an quae díxit sint vera ómnia, $_{45}$ 525

Sed párvi pendo: illúd mihi multo máxumumst,

Quod míhi pollicitust ípsus gnatus. núnc Chremem

Convéniam: orabo gnáto uxorem: si ínpetro,

Quid álias malim quam hódie has fieri núptias?

Aliquót me adierunt, éx te auditum qui aíbant, hodie fíliam Meam núbere tuo gnáto: id viso tún an illi insániant. 535 SI. Auscúlta paucis: ét quid te ego velim ét tu quod quaerís scies.

CH. (Carelessly.) Auscúlto: loquere quíd velis. 5 SI. (Earnestly.) Per té deos oro et nóstram amicitiám, Chreme,

Quae incépta a parvis cum aétate adcrevít simul,
Perque únicam gnatám tuam et gnatúm meum,
Quoius tíbi potestas súmma servandí datur,
Vt me ádiuves in hác re, atque ita uti núptiae Fueránt futurae, fíant. CH. Ah, ne me óbsecra:
Quasi hóc te orando a me ínpetrare opórteat.

Alium ésse censes núnc me atque olim quóm dabam? 545 Si in rémst utrique ut fíant, arcessí iube.

Sed si éx ea re plús malist quam cómmodi
Vtríque, id oro te ín commune ut cónsulas, Quasi ílla tua sit Pámphilique ego sím pater.

SI. Immo íta volo itaque póstulo ut fiát, Chreme: 550 Neque póstulem abs te, ni ípsa res moneát. CH. Quid est?

SI. Iraé sunt inter Glýcerium et gnatum. CH. (Care-lessly.) Aúdio.

SI. Ita mágnae, ut sperem pósse avelli. CH. (Impatiently.) Fábulae.

SI. Profécto sic est. CH. Síc herele ut dicám tibi:
Amántium irae amóris integrátiost. 555
SI. Hem, id te óro ut ante eámus. dum tempús datur, Dumque eius lubido occlúsast contuméliis, 25
Priŭs quam hárum scelera et lácrumae confictaé dolis
Reddúcunt animum aegrótum ad misericórdiam, Vxórem demus. spéro consuetúdine et 560
Coniúgio liberáli devinctúm, Chreme, Dein fácile ex illis sése emersurúm malis.
CH. Tibi ita hóc videtur: át ego non posse árbitror Neque illum hánc perpetuo habére neque me pérpeti.
SI. Qui seís ergo istue, nísi periclum féceris? 565
CH. At istúc periclum in fília fierí gravest.
SI. Nempe incommoditas dénique huc omnis redit, 35
Si evéniat, quod di próhibeant, discéssio.
At sí corrigitur, quót commoditatés vide:
Princípio amico fílium restítueris, 570
Tibi génerum firmum et fíliae inveniés virum.
CH. (Vielding against his better judgment.) Quid istic? si ita istuc ánimum induxti esse útile, 40
Noló tibi ullum cómmodum in me claúdier.
SI. Meritó te semper máxumi fecí, Chreme.
CH. Sed quíd aïs? SI. Quid? CH. Qui scís eos nunc discordare intér se? 575
SI. Ipsús mihi Davos, qui íntumust eorúm consiliis, díxit:
Et is mihi suadet núptias quantúm queam ut matúrem. 45
Num cénses faceret, filium nisi scíret eadem haec vélle?

NOTES

The notices, called διδασκαλίαι, concerning the origin and first performance of the plays of Plautus and Terence, were inserted after the titles of the MSS. probably by grammarians of the Augustan age.

Graeca, a Comordia palliata, where the characters and scenes are Greek; opposed to togata.

Menandru = $M \epsilon \nu \acute{a} \nu \delta \rho o \nu$.

Ludis Megalensibus. These were the games celebrated April 4th-9th in honour of the $\mu\epsilon\gamma\dot{a}\lambda\eta$ $\mu\dot{\eta}\tau\eta\rho$, Cybele, whose worship was introduced into Rome 205 B.C.: Livy 29. 10, 11. Theatrical representations did not form part of this festival till 194 B.C.

Aed. Cur. These officials are mentioned, because it was their business to settle with the poet and contract with the managers of the company.

egere, 'brought out.'

Praen. = Praenestinus.

modos fecit, 'music by.'

Claudi, sc. serves. This man wrote the music for all the plays of Terence.

tibiis paribus tota, i.e. with one musical accompaniment throughout, unlike the Hauton Timorumenos, which was 'primum tibiis inparibus, deinde duabus dextris.'

Prologue.

The six plays of Terence are headed by Prologues, in which the poet anticipates criticisms or defends himself against them; in two of them, the prologues to the Phormio and the Eunuchus, he also retorts by criticising the performances of his critic. It is clear that the Andria was already known to the public, or at least to some portion of it, because Terence states (see Il. 13-16) the ground on which it had been attacked; but we do not know how this knowledge had been got. The play may have been performed before 166 B. C.; and the prologue, which we have, may have been written for its second appearance, as was the case with the Hecyra. Yet it seems strange that Terence should make no mention of a previous performance, if one had really taken place, especially as he distinctly states that the Hecyra had been condemned on the stage, when it was first brought out (see prologue to that play). Therefore it seems more probable that the Andria, like the Eunuchus, was known merely from the private rehearsal before the Curule Aediles. This view receives strong confirmation, if we can accept the story told by Suetonius of the recitation before the poet Caecilius; for which see Introduction.

The prologues to the plays of Terence differ from those to the plays of Plautus in several points: (1) Terence's prologues are genuine, while nearly, if not quite, all of Plautus' prologues are spurious; (2) of the prologues of Plautus (twelve in number, if we count the two remaining lines belonging to the Pseudulus), nine contain an analysis of the plot, which Terence thought unnecessary; (3) Terence never mentions himself by name; we find the name of Plautus in the prologues to the Trinummus, Asinaria, Pseudulus.

1. Poeta, used by Terence in all his prologues instead of his own name. quom. Always in Plautus and Terence. The Latin writers till the end of the republican period regularly avoided a u after u or v. So we have farvolo in 35, relicuom in 25 (see note). The correct form in Cicero is cum.

animum adpulit, cf. 446. adfellere commonly means 'to bring to land,' and Cicero gives the metaphor fully, de Orat. II. 154 tamquam ad aliquem libidinis scotulum, sic tuam mentem ad philosophiam adpulisti. The expression = 'se conferre,' 'to devote oneself to.'

2. id negoti, 'this simple task;' cf. 521. The expression is of more limited meaning than id negotium, since the genitive is partitive. Terence often has similar phrases in a comic sense. just as diminutives are used; e.g. Haut. 848 quid hominis cs? negoti. This form of the genitive of substantives in -ius, -ium is universal in all writers, till the elegiac poets Ovid and Propertius introduced -ii; finding, of course, such forms as imperi etc. unmanageable. So 44 benefeci. Adjectives in -ius, however, do not contract the genitive.

3. fabulas, instead of fabulae, by attraction. Cf. 26, 47. This attraction of a substantive into the case of the relative is common in fecisset bears the same relation to credidit that the fut. perf. would to a primary tense.

Plautus also, and found in Vergil, Horace, Ovid.

4. multo, with aliter.

intellegit. Note the e in this and one other compound of lego, neglego.

5. prologis, in spite of πρόλογος, would seem natural to a Latin ear, accustomed to such compounds as prologui. So too propinare and Gr. προπίνειν.

scribundis. This older form of the gerund and gerundive is familiar in iure dicundo, res repetundae, potiundi, &c. The MS. authority is unanimous for scribundis here and for scribendum in 1.

operam abutitur, 'uses up his time.' Abuti in the older Latin, like the Gr. $d\pi o \chi \rho \hat{\eta} \sigma \theta a \iota$, meant not 'to misuse,' but 'to use entirely;' even Cicero, when he wishes to give the word the meaning 'misuse,' generally adds some adverb or equivalent expression. It is regularly followed by the accusative in the comic poets, by the ablative later. Utor and potior are sometimes followed by the accusative in the comic poets; fungor always by accusative, with one doubtful exception (Adel. 603); fruor always by ablative, except Haut. 401, where the accusative is found.

- 6. qui, an old form of the ablative, used by Plautus and Terence in several senses:—
- (1) as a relative, referring to any gender and either number— 'wherewith.' Cf. 512.
- (2) as a final particle with a subjunctive expressing purpose—' in order that.' Cf. 307, 334, and the present passage.
 - (3) as an interrogative adverb-'how?' Cf. 150, 302.
- (4) introducing curses $(\pi \hat{\omega} s, utinam)$. Cf. Phor. 123; Plaut. Trin. 923, 997 (not common).
- (5) as an indefinite particle with words of emphasis $(\pi \omega s)$, 'somehow,' e.g. hercle qui, edepol qui, quippe qui, et qui. Cf. 148. It is commonly used by the later writers also in atqui, alioqui, &c.

argumentum narret, 'explain the plot,' the natural use of a prologue, though Terence's practice is to make this unnecessary by explaining the argumentum as far as is needful in the first scene of the play.

- 7. veteris poetae. This 'old poet' was Luscius Lanuvinus. Terence never mentions him by name, but refers to him as poeta vetus in the prologue to Phorm. I and I3, and, with the epithet malevolus added, in the prologue to Haut. 22.
- 8. vitio dent, 'impute as a fault.' 'The dative sometimes denotes the design and operation of a thing (that to which it serves and tends).' Madvig, § 249. So vitio vertere, probo ducere, &c. The subject of dent is the old poet and his party.

advortite is the reading of all the MSS.: attendite is given by Donatus.

Menander. See Introduction.

Perinthiam, a comedy named from one of the characters, a girl from Perinthus in Thrace, just as Andria means a girl from Andros.

10. To know one is to know both on account of their general similarity of plot.

- 11. non ita, 'not very,' a common phrase. The text perhaps gives the best arrangement of a somewhat doubtful line.
- 12. oratione ac stilo, 'execution and form.' argumentum means the material of the plot, oratio the manner in which it is worked out, stilus the form of the language. This last = the word 'scriptura,' Phorprologue 5.
 - 13. quae eonvenere, 'all that he found suitable.'

in Andriam, of course with transtulisse.

14. fatetur. Bentley has a characteristic note: 'Quis fatetur? an Menander? Is enim nominativus in proximo est. Adde igitur in fine versus, ex Perinthia hic. It is true that Terence constantly refers to himself in the prologue as hic, e.g. 19; but the subject of fatetur is quite clear without it. Bentley for the same reason alters antehac into ante hic, Phor. prol. 4.

transtulisse. The omission of se and other pronouns before the infin. is frequent in Terence, e.g. 145, 358, 394, 401, 470, etc.

15. isti, i.e. the critics.

disputant, 'maintain,' a rare use of the word followed by acc. and infin.

in eo, 'therein,' in doing so;' the words are best explained by referring them to vituperant, as in 94 in ea re refers to conflictatur of the preceding line. Latin writers generally use in ea re, eins rei, &c., instead of the ambiguous in eo, etc.

- 16. contaminari, lit. 'to bring into contact' (for contagminare, same stem as tango). This verb (but not the substantive contaminatio) is used here and in Haut. prol. 17 in the sense of amalgamating two plays into one. Later it always means, to stain,' 'to mar,' and thus is found Eun. 552. The charge of 'contaminating' is mentioned by Terence and admitted to be true in this prologue and in those to the Eunuchus and Adelphi; the latter is peculiar, because the originals, from which it is taken, are by different poets, viz. Menander and Diphilus. The charge is also admitted in the prologue to Hauton Timorumenos; though Terence tells us that that play, however, is ex integra Graeca integram comoediam.
- 17. 'Is not the result of all their wisdom, that they are wise in nothing?' An instance of oxymoron, such as is common in Greek; e.g. Menander's φρονῶν οὐδὶν φρονεῖ.

ne, as often in the older Latin, for nonne, which is little used by Plautus and Terence. Cf. 238 note.

18. Naevium, Plautum, Ennium. See Introduction. Note that they are put in chronological order. The poet probably means that he has followed them as models (auctores), not in 'contaminating,' but merely in the free use of Greek material.

- 20, 21. 'And his true wish is to rival their freedom rather than the pedantic accuracy of his critics.'
- 22. dehine, of future time (cf. 190), while abhine is of past. The word is always monosyllabic in Plautus and Terence; later poets seem to have used it as they liked.

porro, 'in future.'

23. dicere. Possibly here and in 535 nubere we ought to scan the last syllable long, the old termination being -rei; but it seems that all undoubted instances of this lengthening (of which 437 dicere is to be noted) occur when the word is followed by a strong pause. In 535 there is no pause at all after nubere, and no strong pause here. More probably we should scan maledi | cere ma | lefacta; and so 267 Pam | thile quid |.

noscant, 'have to listen to.'

24. favete, sc. $linguis = \epsilon \dot{v}\phi \eta \mu \epsilon \hat{v} \tau \epsilon$.

rem cognoseite, i.e. do not condemn without hearing, as you treated the Hecyra. See note on Prologue.

25. spei, monosyllable.

relieuom. This word is always of four syllables in the older writers; relieuos in Lucr. 1.560 (cf. Munro's note). Catullus, Tibullus, Vergil, and Horace, unwilling either to lengthen the first syllable or unite the two last, avoid the word altogether. Later it is used as a trisyllable, e.g. by Juvenal.

26. de integro, 'anew'; so ab integro, ex integro; no notion of integrae as opposed to contaminatae comoediae. For case of comoedias cf. 3 note.

27. exigendae, 'hissed off.' So exactus, Hec. prol. 15.

prius, explained as = potius; cf. 'rather,' the comparative of 'rath' (= 'early'). It may = prius quam spectatae sint.

ACT I. Scene 1.

Simo tells his freedman Sosia of the early life and disposition of his son Pamphilus; of the love of the latter for Glycerium, and its accidental discovery; of the consequent refusal of Chremes to allow his daughter Philumena to marry Pamphilus; finally, of his (Simo's) pretence that the match is nevertheless to take place, in order that he may test the obedience of his son.

Thus Terence following his ordinary practice, uses the first scene to give us such information about the position of affairs as enables us to understand the action of the play.

- 28. istaec, i.e. the things which the slaves have brought in from the market.
- 29. adesdum. In later Latin this enclitic use of dum is confined to the negatives nondum, nedum, vixdum, to dudum and interdum, and the imperatives agedum, agitedum. It is used by the comic poets with all imperatives (e.g. abidum Haut. 249, circumspicedum Plaut. Trin. 146), with cho (184, 616). Quidum (interrogative) is found in Terence, e.g. Hec. 319, primumdum Plaut. Trin. 98. Whether adesdum etc. should be written in one word or two is an unimportant point, on which no agreement seems to have been made.

volo, sc. conloqui. Cf. 45 (see note), 345, 536, 872.

paucis (ablative), sc. verbis, a common ellipse, cf. 536 note; though verbis is sometimes expressed, e.g. Plaut. Mil. 374 faucis verbis te volo, Trin. 963 te tribus verbis volo.

dictum puta, cf. Ovid, Met. 4. 477 facta puta, quaecunque iubes.

30. nempe, sc. vis.

curentur, of cookery; used by Plautus also in this sense.

31. ars, sc. coquendi.

hoc, ablative after amplius.

33. eis. sc. artibus. further explained by the substantives fide et tacitumitate in apposition. Wagner says, 'It is quite perverse to supply artibus.' But why perverse?

artes = 'qualities.' Cf. Plaut. Trin. 72 artes antiquae tuae.

- 35. a parvolo = ἐκ παιδός. Cf. 539 a farvis.
- 36. iusta ac clemens, 'reasonable and mild.'
- 37. ex, 'instead of,' as often; e. g. Cic. Phil. 3. 9. 22 ex oratore arator.
- 38. propterea quod, 'because your service was given with the spirit of freedom.' Cf. Adel. 886 servom hand inliberatem, and Menander's line, ἐλευθέρως δούλευε, δοῦλος οὐκ ἔσει, 'For freedom's spirit makes the bondman free.'

servibas. Terence and Plautus seem to have used -ibam or -icbam for the imperfect of the fourth conjugation almost at pleasure, e.g. 930 aicbat, 932 aibat, and Phorm. 83 servicbat; but always scibam, nescibam. The shorter form is sometimes employed by later poets, e.g. accibant, by Lucretius; audibant, custodibant, by Catullus; lenibat, nutribant, vestibat, by Vergil; audibat, mollibat, by Ovid; largibar, by Propertius.

39. pretium = praemium, i. e. freedom.

40. haud muto factum, 'I wish no change in it,' i. e. 'I do not regret it.' Cf. 949 de uxore nil mutat Chremes. It is possible to join factum to gaudeo; (so Bentley, followed by Meissner). Then muto must stand absolutely, or at any rate without an object expressed, and factum gaudeo may be illustrated by Plaut. Most. 5. 2. 26 (1147) bene hercle factum, et factum gaudeo. But factum gaudeo si tibi quid feci aut facio sounds rather feebly emphatic.

42 Scan et id gratum fuisse.

habeo gratiam. Note the singular with habeo (unlike ago). The usage is so thoroughly accepted, that some editors change 770 and Plaut. Trin. 659 summas habeo gratias (read by every MS.), turning the latter into summam habebo gratiam. A limit, however, ought to be put upon this fearless support of rules by the banishment of all exceptions. The only other instance of the plural with habeo, Phor. 894 gratias habeo atque ago, is explained by the presence of ago. There is a play on gratum and gratiam, 'I am grateful that you are gratified by my service.'

43. Scan sed hoe mihi.

hoe, 'these words,' i.e. the commemoratio.

- 44. exprobratiost inmemori. The verbal substantive is often followed by the same case as the verb. So Livy, 23. 35. 7 exprobratio euiquam; Verg. Aen. 6. 542-iter Elysium. Still more remarkable is the use of the acc. by Plautus after receptio, curatio, tactio (very often after the latter).
 - 45. quin die. Note the following uses of quin :-
 - (1) 'why not?' either in direct or indirect questions;
- (2) with imperatives as here: this use was a natural development of the first; for such a question as quin taces? is equivalent in sense to a command;
- (3) in the common sense 'but that' after verbs expressing prevention, doubt, and the like with a negative;
 - (4) as a corroborative particle, 'indeed,' 'verily.' Cf. 704.
- quid est, indic., not subjunct. Cf. 449, 849, 878. In conversational or animated languages a question is often put, logically, though not grammatically dependent on another verb or sentence, e. g. on such expletives as die mihi, cedo, responde, vide, etc. So frequently in Plautus and Terence, even where later writers would make the question dependent and use the subjunctive.' Roby, School Latin Grammar, 751. In 705, quid facies? cedo, the mere order of the words removes all difficulty.

quid est quod = 'wherefore,' quod being acc. of respect.

me velis. The ellipse of some such word as conloqui seems the established explanation; but if the phrase stood in this passage only, we might be led by comparing 1. 50 to supply facere, thus giving a very simple construction to quod.

- 47. quas credis, etc. = hac nuptiae, quas credis esse, non sunt verae. Cf. 3.
 - 48. quor, the old spelling of cur, always in Plautus and Terence.
- 49. Simo divides his discourse into three heads, gnati vitam, 51-156; consilium meum, 157-167; quid facere, etc., 168-170.
- 51. nam introduces the narrative, as $\gamma \dot{a} \rho$ in Greek. Bentley reads ac, Meissner cl at the end of this line, thus making fuit a part of the protasis, and sindebat (59) the apodesis. It seems simpler to leave the text as it is, so that fuit is apodosis. Simo begins afresh at 55. Nothing will make the passage run very smoothly; the repetition of nam seems to show a want of finish.
- excessit ex ephebis. Cf. Plaut. Merc. 61. The age of the $\xi\phi\eta\beta oi$ at Athens was from 18 to 20. Cie. pro Arch. 3. 4 has ϵx fueris excessit, a translation of the Greek $\epsilon \kappa$ mathew $\epsilon \xi \eta \lambda \theta \epsilon v$, and de Or. 2. 3.26 he quotes this line, and admires the following passage (i.e. about the next fifty lines) as a longa narratio. He then speaks of the brevitas and venustas of effectur, imus (117).
- 52. liberius must scan libriis. Cf. dextra from dextera. This is surely more natural than to consider vivendi a dissyllable. The meaning of the comparative seems clear enough; but Bentley thought it nonsense and changed the word into libera.

fuit, monosyllable.

- antea, not elsewhere in Terence or Plautus.
- 53. qui scire, etc. 'how could you have known (if you had wished) or learnt his character?'

posses is a potential subjunctive. Cf. 135 note.

- 54. magister, the slave who took a boy to school and back, $\pi\alpha i\delta a \gamma \omega \gamma i s$.
- 55. plerique omnes, 'almost all,' a strengthened form of plerique. Cf. Phor. 172, Plaut. Trin. 29.
- 56. ut animum adiungant, explanatory of quod. Animum adiungere is not found elsewhere; but Terence uses many verbs with animum, e. g. adpellere (1, 446), adplicare (193).
- 57. alere, instead of alendi after studium. Cf. Mad. §§ 417, 419. The construction is common in the comic poets, e. g. after opera, lubido, occasio: Terence has gerund and infin. together after the last, Phor. 885. Vergil has instances e.g. after modus, cupido, tempus. It is found in prose also; Cicero has tempus abire, ratio amittere, etc.

canes ad venandum = canes venaticos.

ad philosophos after animum adiungant. It is rather hard on the philosophers to make attendance at their teaching a mere alternative to the keeping of horses and hounds; but a Roman audience could not appreciate the joke as the Athenians would. There was no class at Rome answering to the Sophists.

58. horum, plural, because quod has been expanded in 56, 57.

nil. The accus of neuter pronouns and adjectives is not uncommon after studere; cf. Haut. 382, Flec. 199. The construction is also used by Cicero and Livy. Cf. 157 note.

60. non iniuria, 'not without cause.' Cf. 378, Haut. 581.

61. adprime, almost confined to Plautus and Terence, and always used by them with adjectives.

nequid $nimis = \mu \eta \delta \delta v$ é $\gamma \alpha v$, a hackneyed Greek proverb. It is with commonplace reflections of this sort that Sosia, like a chorus, relieves the garrulity of Simo. Cf. 67, 68, and 142, 143.

62. omnis. Some strangely read omnes (nom.). It is far more simple to make the subject of all the infinitives the same. perferre, historic infin. Cf. 97, 147, 369. This construction is thoroughly characteristic of the style of Terence, who in this respect is, as Spengel remarks, the Sallust of early Latin. It will be noticed that he even uses the historic infin. co-ordinate with a finite verb. If the words advorsus—illis below were considered to be an interpolation, it would be possible to regard the infinitives as in apposition to vita.

63. quibus—quomque. Tmesis. Cf. 263, 455, 486. sese dedere, 'comply with the wishes of.' Cf. 897.

64. Forum, dissyllable. The arrangement of the first three words is rather uncertain; and some have suspected that advorsus—illis is an interpolation. Bentley has subjected the words to an unsparing criticism, and it must be admitted that the passage does not run very well. But it is quite in the character of Simo to enforce his point by the addition of a couple of participial clauses, in which he lingers on the merits of his son. At any rate they sound natural enough on the stage. Spengel, adding csse to advorsus, turns it into an infin. co-ordinate with obsequi, etc.; but there is no grammatical difficulty in the text.

65. illis. Bentley's correction aliis is unnecessary. The plural notion is already contained in nemini.

ita = quod si facias. The MSS. give ita ut, which seems very awkward. ut probably was introduced on the false analogy of such passages as 80 ita ut fit.

66. invenias. Cf. 571.

68. This line is quoted by Cicero. De Am. § 89, as a general sentiment without the qualifying words hoc tempore.

69. mulier quaedam, Chrysis, named in 105.

abhinc. Cf. 22 note.

- 70. viciniae, partitive gen. depending on hue, as often after ubi, que, nusquam, etc. hue viciniam is a needless correction, and huic viciniae, given by the MSS., a good instance of a copyist's blunder.
- 71. cognatorum neglegentia. This means a good deal in the mouth of an Athenian. At Athens, if an orphan girl was left poor, the next of kin was bound by Solon's law to marry her or to provide a substantial dowry. Cf. Phor. 125. Cognatus is not used in the technical Roman sense, but as a translation of the Greek $\partial \gamma \chi \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \psi s$. The $\partial \gamma \chi \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \psi s$ in this case was Crito, who appears 796. As a citizen of Andros he was not subject to the Athenian law; so there is no reason to suppose that it was his legal duty to provide for Chrysis at Andros. He does not appear to have objected to inheriting anything that she might have left at her death.
 - 73. ei, interjection, = hei.
- 74. duriter, 'with hard work.' Adverbs in -iter, formed from adjectives in -us, are common in early Latin, e. g. avariter, amiciter, munditer; later the termination -e became usual, but note humaniter (as well as humane) and naviter as exceptions.
- 81. esset, from esse, not from edere, as suggested by the older commentators.
- 82. egomet. This omission of a verb of 'saying' is common in Terence. Cf. 336. So Verg. Aen. 1. 37 hace secum, 3. 99 hace Phoebus.
- 83. habet. The regular exclamation over a gladiator who had received a blow. So hoe habet, Plant. Most. 715, Verg. Aen. 12. 296.
- 84. venientis aut abeuntis, i. e. on errands to and from the houses of their respective masters.
- 88. quid, as in common talk we sometimes begin an explanation with 'why.'
- symbolam = $\sigma \nu \mu \beta o \lambda \dot{\eta}$, called collecta by Cicero de Or. 2. 57. 233. It was the contribution of each individual to the common fund for the payment of a dinner. So Phor. 339 asymbolus = a person who dines without being obliged to pay.
- 90. nil quiequam, 'nothing whatever,' an emphatic pleonasm; cf. Phor. 80, 250, and elsewhere in Terence. It is impossible to suppose, with Mr. Papillon, that quiequam is an adverbial accusative in these passages. For though, as he points out, nemo quisquam is not certain from Eun. 226, the phrase is established by Eun. 1032, Hec. 67.
- 91. enimvéro, 'of course,' 'naturally,' used also to express anger or impatience; cf. 206. This emphatic use of enim, sometimes at the beginning of a sentence, is common in Plautus and Terence; cf. Plaut. Trin. 1134 enim me nominat. The shortening of the second syllable of enimvero seems regular in Terence. Phor. 528 is a very doubtful exception.

spectatum, 'tested,' cf. 820, Cic. Verres 2. 3. 78 spectatio pecuniae; but the metaphor can hardly be extended to conflictatur.

93. ingeniis, 'characters,' i.e. his friends; abstract for concrete. So Cie, Arch. 5 de ingeniis iudicare of persons.

eius, monosyllable.

94. auimus. Note the change of subject.

in ea re. Cf. 15 note.

95. seias, suae, both monosyllables. So scio 653, 658. The second pers. subj. is used here in the general sense, as we say 'one may know,' not to address Sosia. Cf. Mad. § 370.

modum, 'control.'

97. dicere, histor. infin.; cf. 62 note.

fortunas, stronger than the sing.

98. qui. Note that meas = genitive of ego; the relative agrees with the meaning.

100. ultro, emphatic, because it was usual for the father of the intended bridegroom to make the first proposal, as Philto does, Plaut. Trin. 449. This is a good example of the meaning of ultro.

101. dote summa, cf. 951, where the amount is put at ten talents.

102. despondi, se. eum. Commonly used of promising a daughter in marriage; but the ordinary arrangement has heen inverted on account of the unparalleled enthusiasm of Chremes.

103. Some MSS, give quid igitur obstat quor non verae fiant. It is necessary on metrical grounds to omit igitur or verae. Bentley showed conclusively that verae ought to be omitted. It must have been brought into the text from 47 by some copyist, who did not understand that fieri = verae esse; in fact, that fieri verae is almost nonsense. Cf. 529, 543, where fieri stands alone with the same meaning.

To4. ferme in diebus paucis, quibus haec acta sunt, 'almost within the few days in the course of which the contract was made.' Scarcely was the betrothal over, when the death of Chrysis and the consequent disclosure ruined the hope of Chremes.

106. ibi tum, pleonastic, as in 131, 223, 634. ibi is temporal, as also without tum 356, 379; frequent in Livy.

107. qui amabant = amatores, i. e. those who loved her when she was alive. amarant is an unnecessary correction.

 $\begin{tabular}{ll} {\bf frequents}, {\rm \ used \ adverbially, = 'often.'} & {\it frequenter} {\rm \ is \ not \ found} \\ {\rm \ before \ Cicero.} & \end{tabular}$

110. consuetudinis, 'acquaintance.'

III. tam fert familiariter, 'feels with such tenderness.' Note the unusual separation of tam from the adverb; but cf. Cic. Arch. 8. 17 tam animo agresti.

- 113. humani, 'sympathetic.'
- 115. eius, i. e. the son. Certainly not humani ingeni, etc.
- prodeo. So produco is technically used of conducting a corpse to the grave.
- 116. etiam = 'yet,' with negative, as in 503. Cic. Tusc. 1.12. Without negative = 'still.' Cf. 940. Verg. Aen. 6. 485 Idaeumque ctiam currus, ctiam arma tenentem.
 - 117. effertur, often like ἐκφέρειν, used of funerals.
- 118. unam, prob. emphatic = 'one specially;' though unus sometimes seems to be used as equivalent to an indefinite article.
 - 120. ut nil supra, sc. esse posset.
- 121. quia tum, needlessly altered into quae tum or quae quom. The repetition of quia like that of praeter ceteras (which happily has defied emendation) is in keeping with the general character of Simo's narrative.
 - 123. honesta ae liberali, 'fair and ladylike.'
- pedisequas, the waiting-women, who would naturally attend the funeral of their mistress. This seems to show that Chrysis was in better circumstances than we should have inferred from 74, 75. But the point need not be pressed.
- 125. percussit. Used almost impersonally. The subject is implied in the preceding words. So Cic. Att. iv. 8 b. 3 audivi Romae esse hominem et fuisse adsiduum. Percussit animum. The verb is often used of the emotions; but it should be noted that percussus sometimes has taken the place of perculsus by confusion in the MSS.
 - attat, 'ah!' Note the length of the last syllable.
 - . hoe illud est. Cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 675 hoc illud, germana, fuit.
- 126. hine illae lacrimae has become proverbial. Quoted by Cicero, Horace, and, in fact, by most people.
 - 128. Note the dramatic change of tense throughout this passage.
 - 131. ibi tum. Cf. 106 note.
 - exanimatus, 'distracted,' a common use of the word.
- 135. ut cerneres, 'so that you might have seen.' The mood is really independent of ut, and must be explained like that of diecret below. These potential subjunctives as they are called rather unfortunately) simply form the apodosis of a conditional sentence, whose protasis is suppressed. Cf. Cic. de Fin. 2. 17 poterat Sextilius impune negare; quis enim redargueret? (i. e. si negaret). So crederes, videres, etc.
- 136. quam familiariter, 'with all a lover's trust' (lit. 'how trustingly'). This is an exclamation added at the end of the sentence to strengthen the verb. So Eun. 178 labascit victus uno verbo, quam cito, and Haut. 1023 sed if se egreditur, quam severus. Sometimes we find quam strengthened by an adverb prefixed; e.g. mire quam, sane quam. Cf. θαυμαστῶs ώs. The phrase can hardly be explained as = quam fetuit familiariter, for this use of quam and the positive adjective or adverb is hardly found till after the Augustine period. Cf., however. Caes. B. G. 6, 26 rami quam late diffundament.

137. quid ais. These words occur very often in Terence. They are used (1) as a request for information, when a remark has not been fully heard, cf. 184; (2) as an exclamation of surprise, when a remark has been heard, but seems scarcely credible, as here, cf. 301, 588, 933; (3) to introduce a new point in conversation, or to call any one's attention, like 'dis done,' cf. 517, 575.

aegre ferens, without object expressed, as Adel. 143 aegre pati.

138. ad obiurgandum causae, cf. 150. Equivalent to the more regular obiurgandi causa, which we have in 158.

139. quid commerui, 'what fault have I committed?' We may say that quid = quam noxiam (Plaut. Trin. 28), or quam culpam (Phor. 206), or quid mali (Plaut. Aul. 728). Commercere is used regularly in a bad, as promercere in a good sense.

141. honesta oratiost, 'it is a fair plea.'

143. Fleckeisen is surely wrong (followed by Spengel and Meissner) in altering dedcrit of the MSS, to dedit. The indic. tulit is necessary, because it refers to a definite act in past time; but qui dederit damnum has only a hypothetical existence.

dederit damnum aut malum, 'committed damage or outrage.' Cf. Plaut. Trin. 219 cum damno et malo, where damno = 'fine,' injury to property, malo = punishment, injury to person. Damnum is a passive partic. of dare, as alumnus, etc.; but the repetition of the verb is merely accidental.

145. The colon may be placed after facinus or comperisse. In the former case indignum facinus is an exclamation standing alone, as Adel. 173. The Or. Recta would be, indignum facinus, Simo! comperi Pamphilum, etc.

147. instat factum, (sc. esse), 'he insists that it is the case.' This construction occurs Plaut. Merc. 242, and perhaps nowhere else. Though uncommon, it does not seem odd. Cicero, too, has acc. and infin. after the similar verb urgere.

148. qui, indefinite; cf. 6 note. It is grammatically possible to take qui as nom. masc. here, but many other passages make the construction certain. The word would generally disappear in translation into English, e.g. 'we part on such terms that he declines to consent to his daughter's marriage.'

149. non tu ibi natum, sc. obiurgasti.

151. In the next three lines Simo gives the excuses (apparently considered valid) which his son would advance. 'By determining that I must marry soon, you have limited my time for intrigue (his rebus); before long I shall have to obey the whims of a wife (alieno more); let me have my fling now and sow my wild oats.'

praescripsti = fraescrifsisti. This syncopated form (is being omitted) of verbs, whose perf. indic. ends in -si, is used by Latin poets (1) in the second pers. sing. perf. indic. (often) and second pers. plur. (rarely); (2) in perf. infin.; (3) in pluperf. subj.; the sing. and first pers. plur. being found; but none of this last set in Terence. All the examples in this play are second pers. sing. perf. indic.; cf. 500, 506, 518, 572, 852, 882, 883: iusse occurs Haut. 1001, produxe Adel. 561, decesse Haut. 32. Vergil has directi, instructi, trace, extinxen, vixet, and the rare accestis. See the exhaustive note of Klotz on this passage.

152. prope adest quom, 'the time is soon coming when.' Cf. Adel. 299, nunc illud est quom.

155. There are two doubtful points, on which it is impossible to pronounce positively: (1) A comma may be placed after ducere; then the apodosis is line 156; or a full stop, in which case the apodosis is line 154, and line 156 stands by itself; (2) nolit or nolet? On the whole we prefer the former, as having the MSS. authority; also cf. 165, 166, sin evental—restat.

amorem, i. e. for Glycerium.

156. 'This at length will be an act of disobedience on his part, which I must punish.'

primum, as elsewhere, almost = demum.

ab illo, closely with iniuria. Cf. Livy, 27. 2 fides a consule.

157-167. Simo now explains his consilium (line 50). 'I am going to tell Pamphilus that he must marry the daughter of Chremes, because (1) if he refuses, I shall have a definite ground for blaming him; (2) Davos always opposes my wishes, and I want him to waste his efforts in defeating an imaginary scheme; (3) if Pamphilus after all consents, I hope to talk Chremes over, and really bring about the marriage (165-167).

157. id operam do. Cf. 307. The neut. pron. is found after such verbs as gaudere, studere, lacrumare, where the accus. of a substantive could not stand. Cf. Madv. § 229. id operam do = id ago, and 58 note.

159. sceleratus. So Adel. 553 eccum sceleratum Syrum. The slave of Latin comedy is usually represented as opposing the wishes of his master, furthering the schemes of his master's son, and looking carefully after his own interests.

160. consumat, 'use it up.'

161. manibus pedibusque, Homer's $\chi \epsilon \rho \sigma i \nu \tau \epsilon$ moof $\nu \tau \epsilon$. The phrase occurs again in 676 without que, which Bentley omits here also. If we accept the omission, it is possible (with Spengel) to extend the asyndeton to obnixe, and make manibus, pedibus, obnixe separately emphasise facturum. Indeed, as far as sense goes, omnia may make a fourth in the list.

162. id. Spengel supplies facturum. This is possible, but the run of the words is against such a construction, and there are other passages where the explanation is inadmissible. See especially 414 note. It is better to consider id an accus. of limitation, indicating the scope or object of the action, and further developed by advo ut incommodet. 'Rather with this very object, that he may thwart my wishes.' Cf. Eun. 1005, nunc id prodeo ut convenian Parmenonem.

adeo. Note the uses of adeo:

- (1) 'so far,' (a) of space, Phor. 55 res adeo redit; (b) of time, 662; (c) of circumstance, 245.
 - (2) 'moreover,' besides.'

(3) adeo ut, 'for the purpose that,' as in this passage.

(4) intensive after (a) pronouns, 415, 579; (b) after adjectives or adverbs, 775; (c) after conjunctions, 440.

It is possible to take adeo as intensifying id, instead of joining it to ut. 164. mala mens, malus animus. Aristophanes, Pax, 1c68 δόλιαι ψυχαί, δόλιαι φρένες. Mens and animus, 'mind and heart,' are often joined by Latin writers, probably without feeling the contrast very strongly.

165. sin eveniat. sin, as usual, in an alternative hypothesis: here contrasted with si nolit (155).

166. ut sit, epexegetic of quod.

167. confore, impersonal; this and confuturum are the only forms used. The rest of the verb is supplied by confieri.

171. nunciam, always three syllables in Plautus and Terence.

i prae, always in this order; cf. Adel. 167 abi prae. Wagner gives eamus nunciam intro to Simo, and i prae, sequor to Sosia, on the ground that the freedman would naturally follow his master; but the action of the play requires that Simo should remain on the stage, and must be responsible for any breach of etiquette.

ACT I. SCENE 2.

Simo meets Davos, and threatens him with penal servitude for life if he attempts to prevent the projected marriage.

173. modo, shortly before the conversation with Sosia.

175. mirabar, hoc si sic abiret, 'I always thought it wonderful if this conduct was really passing unnoticed,' not, 'whether it would pass,' etc.; i. e. si abirct is of course conditional, and mirabar = mirum arbitrabar; hoc and sic, vague words, explained by the position of affairs. For sic abirc, cf. Cic. ad Att. 14, 1.

et eri, etc., 'and all through I feared to what my master's forbearance was tending.' It is possible to take semfer closely with lenitas, constant forbearance.'a form of expression very common in Greek, and not unknown in Latin; ef. Plaut. Pers. 385 non tu nunc hominum mores vides, where the construction seems certain. Further examples might be given, in Cicero, Livy, and Vergil, as well as Plautus and Terence; but as there is no definite article to bind the phrase together, a different construction is almost always fossible. In this passage the sense points to semfer verebar. Davos was frightened by a special display of lenitas on a particular occasion, because he thought it to have been assumed by Simo in order to provoke no suspicion of his real intention. We must add that below (262) Pamphilus speaks of lenis animus as constantly characteristic of his father; but the experiences of son and slave may have been a little different.

178. The change from the iambic to the quicker trochaic metre gives liveliness and emphasis to the statement of the important fact. Simo naturally retorts in trochees. The same change for the same purpose recurs 182.

fecit = dixit, cf. 753.

179. magno malo, 'severe punishment.' Cf. 431, Plaut. Trin. 1062. 180. sie, explained by necopinantes.

duci = 'led on,' rather than 'misled.'

181. oscitantis, 'half asleep,' lit. 'yawning.'

183. astute, adverb.

earnufex, a common term of abuse addressed to slaves; cf. 651, 852; so furcifor (618), mastigia, and many others.

184. ehodum, cf. 29 note.

quid ais, 'what is it that you are saying?' Simo heard Davos speak, but did not distinguish the words.

185. id populus curat scilicet, 'of course the public is interested in his love affairs.' A sarcastic reference to Simo's statement that they were a matter of 'common talk.'

186. hoeine agis an non? 'are you attending to my words or not?' istuc = quod dicis.

ea, the past conduct of Pamphilus.

188. ad eam rem tulit. 'suited such conduct.' tulit is neuter, as in many phrases of the sort. Cf. 443, 832.

189. hic dies, i.e. of his wedding.

aliam-alios, 'different'-'different,' not 'one '-' other.'

190. dehine, cf. 22 note.

sive = vel si. Cf. 293, 294.

in viam, 'into the right path.'

191. hoe quid sit? 'What is the point of all this?' Davos pretends not to understand how he is concerned with the conduct of Pamphilus. Simo proceeds to make it quite clear. The subjunctive must depend on an cllipse of some word like quaero. This construction is more common when one speaker quotes a question first asked by the other; e.g. 499. Adel. 84 quid fecit? to which Demea replies quid ille fecerit? (sc. quaeris). Accordingly some editors assign hoe quid sit to Simo. However, Davos has not asked, as he ought, hoe quid est? but he may have looked it.

qui amant, i.e. in love with some one other than the proposed uxor. 193. 'Too often he guides his heart, love-sick already, towards the worse object.' Cf. 924 se adplicat, a common phrase.

ipsum aegrotum must be taken together; = 'love-sick without the promptings of the magister.'

195. sane, a colloquial word for 'yes,' like etiam.

199. dedam usque ad necem, 'put you for the term of your natural life.'

200. ea lege atque omine, 'on the condition and solemn assurance that.' There is no parallel to this use of omen; but, as Mr. Papillon says, the idea of 'prognostic' may pass into that of 'warning.'

201. nondum etiam, an emphatic pleonasm, as ctiam with a negative = nondum. Cf. 116 note.

callide = plane. We say, 'I shrewdly suspect.'

202. locutus possibly ought to be written locutu's = locutus cs.

circuitione, five syllables, not six. As circuiri (Phor. 614) is four syllables, not three, and so circuimus, circuit, circuis used by Plautus, some editors write circum itione separately, so that the last syllable of circum may be elided. But this separation seems scarcely natural, and circuitio might be pronounced circitio.

203. passus sim. This potential subjunctive (cf. Mad. § 350 b, 135 note) is often used to express in a cautious way what will happen if certain circumstances arise. The perfect tense is usual, as here: 'I would sooner be deceived.' Cf. phrases like hand facile dixerim, 'I shall find it difficult to say.'

deludier, archaic form of the infin. pass., used also by poets generally.

204. bona verba, quaeso, 'hush, hush,'= $\epsilon \dot{v} \phi \dot{\eta} \mu \epsilon \iota$; cf. favete linguis. Davos pretends to be shocked to hear such an ill-omened word as deludier applied to his master.

205. neque tu hoe dices, etc., 'nor shall you say that you were not warned of this,' i. e. I speak so plainly, that you cannot mistake me. Hoc, given by the MSS., is altered by the editors into hand on the authority of Donatus, neque hand being understood like the Greek double negative. But (t) hoc gives a perfectly good sense, (2) Terence has no other instance of neque hand, though it is true that Plautus has, (3) Donatus says, 'tres negativae [i.e. neque, hand, non] pro una negativa accipiuntur,' which clearly shows that he considered neque and hand not as strengthening, but as destroying each other; and that he objected to hoc because he thought a third negative necessary to the sense of the passage; in which view he will not find many followers.

ACT I. SCENE 3.

Davos, alone on the stage, reflects on the difficulties of the situation. 206. enĭmvero; cf. 91 note. Here, as there, it introduces a statement with emphasis.

208. providentur, 'prevented:' providere in this sense is regularly followed by the accusative, and it is impossible to understand why some editors explain quae providentur as irregular for quibus providetur, which would mean the exact opposite.

210. eius, like illum, refers to Pamphilus: eius and huius are monosyllables.

212. nequam faciam, etc., 'lest I should use any intrigue to defeat this intended match.'

213, 214. A passage of great difficulty. It seems best to explain the construction as follows:—si senserit aut causam ceperit is protasis: quo -dabit is apodosis; perii is merely a parenthetical exclamation, not connected with the construction of the sentence; si lubitum fuerit is a subordinate protasis, qualifying causam, equal in sense to quam lubitum fuerit (capere). Bentley goes so far as to read quam instead of si. Translate, 'If he actually detects me, (ruin!) or even finds a pretext satisfactory to himself, rightly or wrongly he will hurry me off to the mill.' The remaining difficulty belongs to quo iure quaque iniuria, which is equivalent in sense to καὶ δικαίως κάδίκως (Aristoph. Plut. 233); but it seems hopeless to attempt any explanation of the relatives as the passage stands, unless Terence supposed himself to be translating ωs δικαίως καδίκως or something of the sort. Bentley's emendation qua iure qua me iniuria, (qua-qua=cum-tum as elsewhere), is at any rate translateable. It is usual to take perii and ceperit as apodosis, and quo-dabit as a relative clause, 'if he detects me, perii; if he takes the fancy, he will find a reason for sending me to the mill, a rendering objectionable (among other reasons) because it contrasts 'ferishing' with being sent to the pistrinum. What Davos feared in any case was not execution, but hard labour.

218. amentium, haud amantium, an excellent instance of the play upon words (paronomasia), so much affected by Plautus, but rare in Terence.

219. quidquid, neuter gender, because the sex is uncertain.

peperisset, oblique for pepererit (cf. 3 note).

decreverunt is historic.

tollere, 'acknowledge.' The father formally acknowledged the newly-born child, and undertook to bring it up as his own, by raising it from the ground, when it had been laid before him: suscipere also is used in this sense; cf. 401.

220. fallaciam, 'absurd story.' Note the mixture of oratio recta and obliqua in the following lines. The story is true, as we afterwards discover; but Davos of course does not know that it is.

223. ibi tum. Cf. 106 note.

225. atque. For the adversative sense, cf. 607.

226. ab ea = α Glycerio, i.e. from the house of Glycerium. Cf. 461, 682. This use of the person for the house is common in Terence.

me, sc. conferam. Cf. 361.

227. opprimat, 'surprise.'

ACT I. SCENE 4.

Mysis, maid to Glycerium, enters from the house, and standing by the door continues a conversation with Archilis, who remains within.

231. tamen, i.e. notwithstanding her drunkenness and carelessness. After adducam Archilis is supposed to reply from within, 'Yes, you must bring her.' This provokes Mysis to speak of her inportunitas, 'obstinacy.'

aniculae, diminutive to express contempt.

232. compotrix, ἄπαξ λεγ. in classical Latin.

233. aliis, sc. mulieribus.

peccandi, 'bungling.'

234. siet. All the sing, and the third plur, of this form are used by Terence and Plautus. Cf. 586, siem; 408, 424, sies; 454, siet; 288, 390, sient.

235. numquidnam, used by Terence as indirect as well as direct interrogative.

turba, 'confusion,' visible in the appearance of Pamphilus. tristitiae, genitive after numquidnam.

ACT I. SCENE 5.

Pamphilus complains bitterly of the attempts made by Simo and Chremes to force a wife upon him, protests that he will never leave Glycerium, and describes how Chrysis on her death-bed committed her to his charge. Mysis remains in the background till 267.

The mixture of Iambic and Trochaic lines in this scene suits well the expression of strong feeling.

236. hoeinest, etc. 'Is this the act or purpose of a human being? is this the duty of a father?' The argument is, 'if any one of human feeling cannot do this, how absurd to say that a father ought to do it!' If -ne is added to hice, hacce, hece, the final e in these words is changed into i. For factum and inceptum some read factu and inceptu. It seems to be a matter of speculation; in such a case MSS. do not help us much, as the final m is indicated merely by a mark over the u.

237. fidem, sc. imploro. Cf. 246, 716 di vostram fidem. Pro does not affect the case of the word to which it is joined, as may be seen from such phrases as pro supreme Iuppiter, pro di immortales.

deum is a monosyllable.

Note quid est si haéc; quid est, sc. contumelia.

238. dare sese. The common construction after decerno, constituo, etc. is the pres. infin. without a subject.

noune. It is doubtful whether we ought not to read non here and in the next line. Plautus and Terence ordinarily use -ne or non instead of nonne. Cf. 17 note.

239. praescisse ante. Note the pleonasm.

Of oportuit Donatus says quam de stomacho repetitum est.

242. suam uxorem. We may scan suam as a monosyllable and elide both vowels, or, considering it as a dissyllable, shorten the first syllable of uxorem.

id, 'his purpose.'

inmutatum. If this word is the pass, participle of inmutater (cf. 275), it must mean 'changed,' as in has no negative force in composition with verbs. Spengel takes it thus, explaining that Pamphilus' grief at the idea of marriage had changed into joy when he found that Chremes refused to allow the match. It is much better to consider it as an adjective, 'unchanged.' The remark is intelligible enough, though not quite logical. Pamphilus, contrasting the changed purpose of Chremes with his own unchangeable fidelity, speaks as if the one were the consequence of the other.

244. si fit, pereo, a graphic variety for si fiet, peribo.

2.45. 'Can any man be so hapless in love or so unfortunate as I am?' This use of the acc. and infin. in indignant exclamations (mostly introduced by the interrogative -ne) is very common. Surprise at the existence of some state of things is combined with a question whether such can really be the case. Cf. 253, 425, 609, 689, 870, 879.

invenustus = ἀναφρόδιτος. Join adeo ut ego sum. Cf. 162 note. 247. Chremetis. Like some other Greek proper names this word follows more than one form of inflexion. Cf. Chremetem 472, 533, Chremeti Phor. 1026; but Chremi (genitive) 368, Chremem 361, 527. As for the vocative, there is plenty of MSS. authority both for Chremes and Chreme.

248. quot modis. We do not hear of any attempts on the part of Simo to induce Chremes to give his consent, after the match was once broken off. The reference probably is to a number of strong expressions used by Chremes, which would lose nothing in transmission through Simo to Pamphilus.

facta transacta, 'settled and concluded,' i.e. the match was definitely 'off.' For the asyndeton in this line, cf. 304, 373.

249. nisi si, like quasi si, ϵi $\mu \hat{\eta}$ ϵi , $\pi \lambda \hat{\eta} \nu$ $\epsilon \hat{\alpha} \nu$, the hypothetical force of the first word being forgotten. Cf. Adel. 594, Plaut. Trin. 474.

250. aliquid monstri. Cf. 2 note, id negoti.

alunt, like a beast. Cf. 57.

ea, gender accommodated to sense. Cf. 607.

252. nam. The connexion seems to be: 'I try to explain the conduct of Chremes; for how can I explain that of my father?'

253. Cf. 245 note.

254. apud forum = in foro, as often in Plautus and Terence. Cf. 302, 745.

257. causam, 'excuse.'

258-9. 'Now if any one asked me, what I should have done if I had been forewarned of it, (I should answer), I would have done something to escape from doing this.' The apodosis to si quis roget must be supplied; the primary tense is used because the supposition is possible. On the other hand, si rescissem facerem contains an impossible hypothesis.

ut ne = ne, as often. Cf. 699, and 335 qui ne.

quod si, not found in Plautus, rare in Terence common later. Cf. 604. Quod is properly an accusative of limitation; cf. 289.

261. huius, 'for her,' i. e. Glycerium; objective, as patris in the next line, nuptiarum, with the daughter of Chremes.

263. quae-quomque. Cf. 63 note.

eine ego ut advorser? 'can I oppose him'? Note the emphatic position of ei. Mad. (§ 353 obs.) explains this construction as = fierine potest ut etc., and it is clear that there must be an ellipse of something of the sort. Cf. 618, where the interrogative -ne is omitted.

264. quorsum aecidat, 'what will be the end' of this hesitation? Cf. 127, 176. Mysis is afraid that the 'hesitation' of Pamphilus will end in the desertion of Glycerium. Some alter incertum to incertumst to avoid the hiatus, which, however, is sufficiently accounted for by the isolated position of incertum. It is a further question, whether the hiatus should be admitted between timeo and incertum or incertum and hoc. We follow Klotz in preferring the latter.

265. peropus, $\tilde{a}\pi a \xi \lambda \epsilon \gamma$. Terence has a large number of adjectives and adverbs compounded with $f \epsilon r$.

advorsum hunc = coram hoc. In 42 advorsum te = tibi.

266. paulo momento, 'by a slight impulse.' Paulus is used as an adjective by Terence here and Adel. 876. In later Latin we find the neut. paulum and the comparative adv. paulo.

267. Pamphile. Cf. 23 dicere and note.

268. dolore, pains of child-birth; in this sense usually plural.

269. nuptiae, of Pamphilus with the daughter of Chremes.

272-3. 'Who trusted me with her heart, even with her life, while I have made her the darling of my heart, and loved her with a husband's love.' The change from indicative to subjunctive is noticeable, but gives no difficulty: quae—credidit merely states the fact; quam—habucrim states the reason on account of which Pamphilus thought it impossible to desert her. Terence might have written otherwise, i. e. crediderit—habui, or two indicatives or two subjunctives. In a case like this a change of mood merely indicates a change in the point of view from which the speaker regards the proposition. If, as here, that change in the point of view is intelligible, the grammatical explanation is equally simple. For a mixture of moods, cf. 536, 650, notes.

274. bene et pudice doctum atque eductum, 'taught and trained in virtue and purity.'

275. ingenium, 'character.'

277. sed vim ut queas ferre, 'but (I fear) that you may be unable to resist compulsion.'

279, 280. The substantives in 280 answer to the adjectives in 279 with the order inverted. If a man is not ferus, he is influenced by consuctudo at any rate; if not inhumanus (going a step higher), by amor; if not ingratus (higher still), by pudor. Tr., 'So unfeeling, so inhuman, so unnatural, that neither association (which influences even the brute creation), nor love (which influences all men), nor honour (which influences all men of feeling) stir me and admonish me to keep my pledge." Note the intensive force of con. Cf. Plaut. Trin. 26 concastigabo pro conmerita noxia, after castigare and meritam have been used.

282, memor essem, an echo of memor esses; hence the tense and mood. Cf. 649.

283. seripta, predicate.

285. vos, you and the other attendant women.

 $2S_{1}^{2}$. nee elam te est = nee te fugit.

utraeque. An irregular use of the plural, since two objects, not two sets of objects, are meant. However, it is not uncommon; several instances are given from prose writers. The reading res nunc utiles (Fleckeisen following Bentley) is unnatural, as giving an ironical sense to utiles, quite out of keeping with the rest of the passage. Contrast 811. It was suggested by the appearance of res (evidently a gloss) in some MSS, and the remark of Donatus, 'legitur et utiles?

288. sient. Cf. 234 note.

289. The arrangement of this line is rather doubtful, but it is only necessary to note that genium, given by Donatus, is preferable to ingenium of MSS.

quod (accus. of respect, ef. 738, 258 quod si) = 'whereas,' and is a common introduction to invocations.

genium tuom, 'your own self.' Cf. Hor. Ep. 1. 7. 94 quod te per genium dextramque deosque Penates Obsecro et obtestor, and Mr. Macleane's note: 'The Romans believed that every man had a genius, though their notions on the subject were very confused apparently. According to the name it should be the attendant on a man's birth, as it was believed to be the inseparable companion of his life. It represented his spiritual identity, and the character of the genius was the character of the man. This explains the expressions genio indulgere, etc.'

293, 294. sive—seu. Each = vel si. Cf. 190.

295. virum, 'husband.'

296. fide. This form of the genitive and dative is common in Plautus, less frequent in Terence; found sometimes in later authors.

300. eave, sc. dicas.

teneo, 'I understand.' Cf. 349, 498.

ACT II. SCENE 1.

Charinus, who is in love with Philumena, daughter of Chremes, hears from his slave Byrria of her proposed marriage with Pamphilus. The latter, being entreated by Charinus to postpone the match, professes the greatest readiness to do so.

301. quid ais. An expression of surprise; cf. 137. It is provoked by some words spoken by Byrria before the opening of the scene. We must scan datūrne, if the final vowel of Byrria is long, as seems probable. Cf. Chaereā, Eun. 558.

302. qui, interrogative. Cf. 6 note.

apud forum = in foro. Cf. 254.

ei. Fleckeisen's emendation for vae, which avoids the shortening of e.

303. usque = semper.

attentus, 'on the strain.'

304. cura, with confectus, not with lassus, as the alliteration shows. Tr., 'wearied and worn with care, it is paralysed.'

305. edepol, 'by Pollux,' like the shorter form fol, is very common in Plautus and Terence. Cf. 486 ecastor.

306. id velis, etc., i.e. 'marry somebody else.'

Philumenam, evidently spoken emphatically, with reference to the meaning of the name, which of course = $\dot{\eta}$ φιλουμένη.

307. id dare operam. Cf. 157 note.

qui. Cf. 6 note.

309. A commonplace in Greek; cf. Aesch. Prom. 263, Soph. Trach. 729, Eur. Alc. 1078, and a line quoted by Muretus, ψηιής νοσοῦντα βᾶστα πᾶς τις νουθετεῖ.

310. hic = ϵgv , like Greek ὅδε ἀνήρ. Cf. 890, Plaut. Trin. 1115. He says it δεικτικῶs, with a gesture, pointing at himself.

si sis, sentias. The use of the pres. subj. has the rhetorical effect of representing the supposition as possible. Cf. 914, Mad. § 347 obs.

age, age, ut lubet, 'well, well, as you like.' Byrria, finding that his philosophic remarks are without effect, gives up Charinus as hopeless. So Phor. 662 age, age, iam ducat, dabo.

311. prius quam pereo. The stricter syntax of later Latin would require peream, as these words express the purpose of the speaker; but by using the indicative, which makes the idea of simple time predominant, Charinus emphasises the hopelessness of his position.

hic. Charinus.

313. credo, parenthetical; ef. 673. So too 314 spero, 578 censes, 854 faxo (but see note). Cicero is very fond of using credo thus in an ironical sense.

prodat, 'prolong,' 'lengthen out.' some days for the marriage; i.e. 'let some few days clapse before the marriage.' For this use of prodo in the sense of produco (615) cf. Plaut. Trin. 340 illi prodit vitam ad miseriam.

315. adeon, 'am I to go to him?' For this emphatic use of the pres. indic, instead of the future or the deliberative subjunct., cf. Verg. Aen. 3, 88 quem sequimur?

320. ad auxilium eopiam = auxili copiam. Cf. 138 note.

321. istue, 'your request.'

322. postremum, 'for the last time.'

324. ne, 'really': only used with pronouns and their adverbs. Cf. 772.

327. principio = μάλιστα μέν; answered by saltem in the next line. ut ne = ne. Cf. 250.

si id non potest = 's'il ne se pent.' Terence often has potest impersonally, or with a neut. pronoun for subject. Cf. Phor. 227, 303, 818. See below, 861 note.

328. haee (for haece) is the regular form of the fem. plur. in Plautus and Terence; probably it remained in use even later. Cf. 438, 656. But the MSS. often give hae.

329. profer. Either (1) sc. nuptiis, 'prolong some few days for the marriage,' or (2) sc. nuptias,' put off the marriage for some few days,' taking dies as acc. of time, not as the object. The first gives an unusual sense to proferre, but the striking parallel in 313 is almost decisive in its favour.

dum proficiscor. We might expect the subjunctive, as the idea of purpose, not of time, is prominent. But after verbs of 'waiting' and suchlike dum and the indic, is found even in Cicero. Cf. Cic. Att. x. 3 ego in Arcano offerior, dum have cognosco; and often in Terence; cf. 714, Phor. 982 retine dum ego hue servos eveco, Haut. 833. Notice that such a translation as 'while I am going' disguises and does not explain the difficulty. The idea of purpose will still be the prominent idea.

330. ne utiquam. Always two words in Plautus and Terence, for the vowel of $n\varepsilon$ must be elided if the first syllable is short; and this is usually proved by the metre. It is true that neutiquam is possible (not necessary), Hec. 403.

liberi hominis, as we might say, 'of a gentleman.'

331. id, 'his act.'

gratiae adponi, 'counted as a favour'; lit. 'be set down to favour'; cf. Hor. Od. 1. 9. 14 lucro adpone.

sibi, 'to his credit;' dat. commodi.

332. apiscier. The simple verb is probably usual in Plautus and Terence, though it has often been altered in MSS. (especially the later) to adipisci. The latter, however, is proved by the metre, Phor. 412.

334. qui. Cf. 6 note. So in the next line, qui ne = ut ne.

335. sat habeo, 'I am satisfied.' Cf. 705, 710.

optume = opportune. Cf. 686.

336. quicquam, sc. dicis. Cf. 82.

337. nisi ea quae nil opus sunt seire, 'except the knowledge of those things, which are useless.' Ea is object after seire. Charinus is referring to Byrria's commonplace remarks, e.g. 305. Bentley changed seire given by all MSS.) into seiri, on the ground that otherwise est must be read for sunt, and he has been followed by most editors, who of course, take seiri as epexegetic of opus sunt, as Bentley did.

fugin hine, colloquial for the imperative, 'be off.'

ego vero ac lubens = cgo vero fugio ac lubens fugio : ac = $^{\circ}$ and indeed: $^{\circ}$ emphatic. Cf. 370.

ACT II. SCENE 2.

Davos informs Charinus and Pamphilus that Simo's announcement of the marriage is not seriously meant, and describes the observations which led him to this conclusion.

338. boni, boni. For similar repetitions of a word, cf. 947, 958.

340. laetus est nescio quid. Cf. Adel. 79 nescio quid tristen video. 342. audin tu illum. Davos' last words show that he has heard of the marriage. Therefore Charinus points out that Pamphilus is wrong in saying nondum hace rescivit mala. 343. intendam, se. gradus or iter.

3.44. abeo, given by all MSS., for which Donatus has habeo, 'I have it,' 'I know,' = inveni. If habeo is accepted, Davos means that after all—notwithstanding toto me oppido exanimatum quaerere—Glycerium's house is the most likely place.

resiste, 'stop.'

qui me, sc. revocat or something of the sort.

345. euge. The last syllable is short, Greek $\epsilon \hat{v} \gamma \epsilon$. It is quit: unnecessary to insert o before Charine, for the pause after quaevo justifies the hiatus.

vos volo. Cf. 29.

346. quin audi. Cf. 45 note.

347. quid tu, sc. timeas.

348. etsi scio? sc. something like tamen pergis dicere? answering to obtandis, but milder.

hodie, se. sunt paratae.

349. tenes. Cf. 300.

350. istue ipsum, 'the very point.' Probably acc. in apposition to rem.

me vide, 'look to me,' 'trust to me.' Cf. Phor. 711, Plant. Trin. 808.

352. non iam, 'no longer.' Emphatic; the danger is over.

qui. Cf. 6 note.

354. Some MSS. give sesse at the beginning of this line; but (1) it creates a metrical difficulty; (2) it is very likely to have been written originally as a marginal note, and thence to have crept into the text; (3) Terence constantly omits the subject of the infinitive. Cf. 14 note.

alia multa, e.g. threats of punishment. Cf. 196 foll.

356. ibi, 'then.' Cf. 106 note. But in the next line it is probably local.

357. huius, 'slave to Charinus here.' Genitive of possession. So Verg. Aen. 3, 319 Hectoris Andromache.

359. redeunti, i.e. to the house of Simo.

ex ipsa re, 'from the state of things,' without any information. 360. paululum, used by Terence both as a substantive and an adjective.

ipsus, 'my master,' common for ipse in Plantus and Terence. Cf. 495, 576, 598, etc.

tristis, 'out of temper.'

361. non cohaerent, i.e. the three things mentioned in the previous line are inconsistent. A marriage ought to have produced festivity and good humour.

istue, sc. narras or evadit.

362. illo, adv. = illuc.

id gaudeo. Cf. 157 note.

363. recte dicis, like 970 narras probe, of good news.

364. matronam, the pronuba, whose duty it was to dress the bride, conduct her to her husband's house, etc.

365. ornati, tumulti. The following genitives in -i for -us are found in Terence, domi, quaesti, tumulti, fructi, ornati, adventi, and in Plautus, domi, quaesti, tumulti, victi, senati, sumpti, gemiti. Note especially that neither ever has domus for the genitive. The old form was -uis; cf. Haut. 287 anuis, Phor. 482 metuis. The form in -us is a simple contraction of this; the form in -i is a contraction after the lightly pronounced -s had been allowed to drop.

368. Chremi. Cf. 247 note.
369. The line in Menander's Perinthia, from which this was copied, τηπς, τὸ παιδίον δ' εἰσῆλθεν έψητοὺς φέρον.

ferre, histor. infin., which seems harsh here, notwithstanding Terence's fondness for it. Cf. 62 note. But the only alternative is to consider convent as=venire vidi, and to take ferre as continuing the construction κατὰ ξύνεσιν. If MSS, counted for nothing at all, Bentley's correction conspexi might be allowed to solve the difficulty."

obolo, abl. of price.
in cenam, 'for dinner,' a use of in and acc. to express purpose not found in good prose. But cf. Plaut. Mil. 3. 2. 19 in prandium.
370. ac. Cf. 337 note.

nullus = an emphatic non sometimes in Plautus and Terence. Cf. Plaut. Trin. 606 nullus creduas. Here sc. liberatus es.

371. ridiculum caput. Cf. Adel. 261 festivom caput. So κάρα is used. We say 'blockhead,' etc.

372. necessus. Here the MSS give necesse, for which Lachmann (on Lucretius 6.815) restored necessus, as being the form always used by Terence before consonants. It is given by the Bembine MS. Eun, 998, Haut. 360, in both cases before a consonant; and there is little doubt that it would have appeared here too, if that MS had not unfortunately been mutilated. It begins at 786.

si huie non dat, 'inasmuch as he does not give her to Pamphilus.' Note the indic.

 $\mathbf{si} = siquidem$.

373. nisi vides, 'unless indeed you look to it:' nisi must be explained by the ellipse of something like neque quidquam efficies.

ambis, 'canvass.' For the asyndeton cf. 248, 304.

ACT II. SCENE 3.

Dayos urges Pamphilus to profess obedience to his father's wish that he should marry Philumena, on the ground that he can do so safely, since Chremes will persist in refusing his consent. With some misgiving Pamphilus promises to take his advice.

375. igitur, i.e. if the marriage is not scriously meant.

376, id. accus, of respect. Cf. 448. It is here explained by the clause which follows.

det, subjunctive, because not the fact, but the effect upon Simo's mind, is important. Of course Pamphilus, not Chremes, is the person with whom Simo will be principally angry; but 'anger at the refusal of Chremes' (which Terence actually writes) is much the same thing as 'anger with Pamphilus for causing the refusal.'

377. tuom ut sese habeat animum = ut tuos animus sese habeat, an imitation of Greek.

378. Note the assonance iniurius—iniuria. Neque id iniuria, 'and that rightly.' Cf. 60.

379. negaris ducere = negaris te ducturum esse. For a still more striking instance cf. 411; also 613. The continuative force of the present makes it almost equivalent to a future.

ibi, of time.

380. illae turbae, 'the dreaded explosion' of the wrath of Simo.

381. difficilest, sc. resistere ci.

tum, introducing a new ground, as in 192. It follows ibi (379), not of course tum (380).

dietum ac factum, or dietum factum (Haut. 904) = $\tilde{a}\mu'$ $\tilde{\epsilon}\sigma\sigma$ $\tilde{a}\mu'$ $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\sigma\nu$, 'no sooner said than done,' not quite so strong as dieto citius, but used with just the same effect.

382. eieiat, sc. Glycerium.

384. ne nega. For ne and imperative, which became very uncommon in later Latin, cf. 543, 868.

385. ex ea re, i. e. from following my advice.

386. ut ab illa excludar, huc concludar, 'to be shut off from her (Glycerium), I am to be shut up here!' (in the house of Chremes with Philumena. An angry explanation of the 'quid fiat' of Davos. Pamphilus means, 'this will be the result of following your advice.' Concludar implies 'caged' like a wild beast. Cf. Phor. 744 conclusam hic haboo uxorem sacvam.

387-398. Davos argues thus: 'You must tell your father, that you will marry Philumena, if he wishes it. Thereby you will leave him no just cause for blaming you, and will upset his plans, which are formed on the supposition that you will refuse; meantime he will not find you another match at once, and something may turn up in your favour. In acting thus you incur no risk, for Chremes is sure to persist in withholding his consent, especially if you keep up your relations with Glycerium. In fact you will gain the credit of complying with your father's wishes without any danger of those wishes being carried out. Perhaps you think, 'I can boldly meet my father with a refusal; all that he can do is to try to marry me to some one, and he will find no one who wants a man like me for a son-in-law. But I warn you that he will rather marry you to some penniless girl (whose parents will not be too particular), than allow you to entangle yourself with a stranger like Glycerium.' This scheme sounded plausible enough; Chremes spoilt it by consenting to the match after all.

389. hic. 'thereupon;' like ibi, of time. Spengel stops after hic, which he takes as = fater with iurgabit; but the adverb is quite necessary to reddes.

390. ei, like ea | 392), is monosyllable.

ut sient must be regarded as an afterthought, since its addition to the phrase strictly requires facies instead of reddes; i.e. we should expect either reddes omnia consilia incerta or facies omnia consilia incerta ut sient.

391. sine ŏmni=sine ullo. Cf. Plaut. Trin. 338 sine omni malitia.

392-393. nee tu ea, etc., 'but do not on that account alter your present conduct (i. e. your intrigue with Glycerium), lest he should change his determination' (i. e. give you his daughter after all). Davos means, 'however determined Chremes is now, we must run no unnecessary risks.' But it is possible to take the passage differently. 'And do not alter your present conduct (i. e. your professed compliance with your father's wishes', merely from fear that (ca causa ne) he may change his determination.' In other words, 'There is no danger in compliance; you can trust the obstinacy of Chremes.' Here ne mutet depends on ca causa, not, as in the first case, on minuceris. The vagueness of hace quae facis, and perhaps the present tense, are in favour of the former rendering.

minuere = mutare. Cf. Hec. 616 sed non minuam meum consilium.

395-396. nam quod tu, etc., 'for though you may hope, "I shall easily repel a wife by a character like mine, no parent will give one to me." (I tell you that) he will find some dowerless maiden rather than allow you to be ruined.' speres, concessive subjunctive. propulsabo. a military metaphor; the bad character of Pamphilus is the weapon with which he repels the enemy. This passage is taken differently by putting a stop after facile and after nemo: 'I shall easily dispose of your hope. "No one will give a wife to a man of my character;" he will find, &c.' But this gives a very unnatural sense to propulsabo; and his moribus for homini sic morato is odd.

399. vide, 'consider.'

quin taces. Cf. 45 note.

400. dicam, se. me ducturum esse.

puerum, 'child;' the sex was at present uncertain.

cautiost = cavendum est. Cf. Adel. 421.

401. suscepturum. Cf. 219 tollere.

402. qui = 11t.

ACT II. SCENE 4.

Davos urges Pamphilus to meet his father boldly.

404. reviso = redeo ut videam. Donatus. Simo acts as he had instructed Sosia; ef. 170.

406. meditatus, often used of 'getting up' a part. Cf. Plaut. Trin. 817 meditatum probe mittam, Adel. 195.

408. qui, abl., as in 6.

differat, 'confound,' lit. 'tear in pieces.'

proin tu fac apud to ut sies, 'accordingly take care to keep your presence of mind.' froin monosyllable, as always.

409. modo ut possim, se. apud me ero: modo ut = dummodo. See Mad. § 351 b. Obs. 2.

410. commutaturum. In the same sense Phor. 638 tria non commutabitis verba hodic inter vos.

411. verbum, i. e. of blame.

ACT II. SCENE 5.

Byrria hears Pamphilus, prompted by Davos, promise to marry Philumena.

412. erus, sc. Charinus.

414. id, 'therefore;' cf. 162 note. Here it is emphasised and repeated by frofterea.

hune, Simo, who has just entered. Byrria knows that, if Pamphilus goes wrong, it will be in Simo's company. Therefore to watch the one is as good as to watch the other.

415. ipsum, Pamphilus.

adeo, emphasises itsum. Cf. 162 note.

hoe agam, 'I will attend to this,' i.e. their conversation. Cf. 186. 416. serva, 'remember,' sc. mea pracecpta, or something of the sort.

417. quasi de improviso, 'as if you did not expect him,' i. e. inno-cen'ly, naturally.

419. nostrae parti and quid hic respondeat both follow timco.

411. obmutuit, se. Simo, who, as Davos had foretold (390, 410), was not at all prepared for obedience.

- 422. 'When my request is granted with a good grace.' In later Latin we should find impetrem, the logical connexion being prominent, not, as here, the connexion of time.
- 423. sum verus, 'Am I not a true prophet?' This refers to 410, 411. Here verus = veridicus. Cf. Plaut. Mil. 1369, where it is opposed to mendax.
- erus uxore excidit, 'my master has lost his wife.' The expression is rather odd; but ef. Plaut. Men. 667 ex hac familia me Alane excidisse intellego. 'Εμπίπτειν is used of fall from power, disappointment of hopes, &c.
 - 424. in mora sies, 'keep us waiting;' cf. 467. Sics, cf. 234, &c.
 - 425. esse. Cf. 253 note.
 - 426. verbum, 'saying.'
- 427. 'All wish to be better off than their fellow.' The double comparative malle melius is noticeable. For the sentiment of. Eur. Med. 86 ώς πῶς τις αὐτὸν τοῦ πέλας μᾶλλον φιλεῖ, and a fragment of Menander, φιλεῖ δ' ἐαυτοῦ πλεῖον οὐδεῖς οὐδένα.
- 431. ut pro hoc malo mihi det malum. 'that for my sorry news he may give me sorry wages.' For this common use of malum in the sense of 'punishment,'cf. 179; and for the play on the two senses of the word, cf. Plaut. Trin. 554, 555, St. quamvis malam rem quaeras, illic referias. Ph. at tu herele et illi et alibi.

ACT II. SCENE 6.

Davos assures Simo, who is not without suspicion of deceit, that Pamphilus is sincere in his professed readiness to marry Philumena.

- 433. ea gratia = cius rei gratia. Cf. 587.
- 434. aeque quiequam nunc quidem, 'nothing now, just as before.' The use of quiequam, suggesting a negative, shows that quiequam nunc quidem = ne nunc quidem quiequam; and aeque = aeque atque antea. Davos means, 'I have no more to say than I had at our last interview.' Cf. 194. All through this dialogue he is thinking of his conversation with Simo, Act I. Scene 2.
 - 436. male habet, 'troubles.' Cf. 940.
 - 437. dicere. The final syllable must be long here; but cf. 23 note.
 - 438. quidpiam, 'in any way.'
 - haec. Cf. 328.
 - 439. 'On account of his association with this strange woman,'
- 440. si adeo, 'if really' (se. hace nuftiae illi molestae sunt). For the force of adeo cf. 415, 162 note.

442. via, 'aright,' a remembrance of Simo's ironical request (190) that Pamphilus iam redeat in viam. Recta, which has got into the MSS. against the metre, must be a gloss on via, due to some one who did not see that the word has much more point without the adjective.

443. ei, a spondee, as Haut. 455 and always in Lucretius.

dumque aetas tulit. Cf. 188.

445. fortem, of character, 'estimable.' Cf. Phor. 324 O vir fortis atque amicus.

446. animum adpulit. Cf. 1 note.

448. quod, accus. of respect or limitation. Cf. 376.

449. quin dic, quid est. Cf. 45 note.

451. drachumis. The old form from $\delta \rho \alpha \chi \mu \dot{\eta}$ was drachuma, as Alcumena from 'Αλκμήνη, etc.

obsonatum, passive impersonal, but perhaps obsonatus from deponent obsonari ought to be read.

454. quod dicendum hic siet, 'as far as one in my place may speak:' hic, 'by me to you,' though it may = 'between ourselves,' i. e. in the absence of Pamphilus: sict, cf. 234. The subjunctive is here used in the relative clause to express 'humiliation.' Cf. Mad. § 364, obs. 2, and such expressions as quod sciam, quod meminerim.

455. quoque, 'in fact;' for the meaning is not, 'You like others are stingy,' but, 'it is true, as well as declared by Pamphilus, that you are stingy.'

per parce nimium. Tmesis for pernimium parce. Cf. 486. It is possible, however, that we should read perparce.

non laudo. A comic repetition of Simo's laudo in 443.

457. rei, monosyllable here and in the next line.

veterator, 'old rascal.'

ACT III. SCENE 1.

Simo overhears a conversation about Glycerium and her child. He thinks that the story has been invented by Davos to prevent Chremes from allowing the marriage between Pamphilus and Philumena.

459. pol, a common abbreviation for edepol.

460. invenias, potential subjunctive. Cf. 53, 135 etc.

461, ab Andria, 'from the Andrian's house.' Cf. 226 note. narras = dicis, as often in Terence.

464. Cf. 219.

465. actumst, 'it is all over,' an expression used originally in the law-courts of a case already concluded. So Phor. 419 'actum,' aiunt, ne agas.

siquidem is found in Ovid also with the first syllable short. Here Spengel reads si equidem.

467. in mora illi sis. Cf. 424.

471. adfertur fallacia. Cf. 432 fallaciam fortare.

474. cito. The pause helps to lengthen the last syllable. Terence has it short, when the word is not followed by a pause. Cf. Adel. 443.

- 475. non sat commode divisa sunt temporibus tibi, Dave, haec, 'your incidents, Davos, are not skilfully timed.' Simo might have said that they were too skilfully timed. They happened so exactly as they were wanted, that they looked artificial.
- 477. num immemores discipuli, 'have your pupils really forgotten their lesson?' Num has anironical force: discipuli, though masculine, refers to Mysis, Lesbia, and Glycerium.
- 479. quos mihi ludos redderet, 'what tricks he would have played upon me!' Now Simo does not mind, because he is faratus, and the marriage is not verac.
- 480. ego in portu navigo, proverbial for 'I am safe.' Cf. 845 omnis res est iam in vado. So ἐν λιμένι πλέω.

ACT III. SCENE 2.

Meantime Glycerium has given birth to a son, and the mid wife Lesbia is represented as giving some directions to the servant, Archilis, who is left in charge during her temporary absence. Simo still thinks this to be all part of a trick which is being played upon him, a mistake which is encouraged by Davos, who puzzles Simo by his apparent willingness to forward the marriage of Pamphilus and Philumena.

The metre 481-4 is Bacchiac Tetrameter. See Introduction on Metres.

481. Archilis, cf. 228. One MS. reads ofortent, cf. Adel. 754 non to have fudent?

4%2. signa ad salutem = signa salutis, cf. 138, 320 notes.

483. ista, sc. Glycerium.

lavet. The active of this verb is sometimes used intransitively, in the sense of the passive, or rather middle; cf. Haut. 618, Liv. 44. 6.

post dëinde. Notice the tautology, cf. 106 note: here perhaps purposely put into the mouth of an uneducated woman. Deinde is here scanned as a trisyllable.

4$4 dari bibere. Three constructions are used to express 'to give to drink':—

(1) Simple inf., as here. Cf. Pl. Pers. 5. 2. 40, Cic. Tusc. 1. 26, 65, Liv. 40, 47. 5. This is a Graceism.

- (2) Subjunctive. Cf. Pl. Stich. 757 tum vos date bibat tibicini.
- (3) Quod with subj. Cf. Pl. Cist. 1. 1. 19 nimium dabat quod biberem.

486. per eeastor scitus, by Tmesis for perscitus ecastor. Cf. 455. For the intensive use of per cf. 265. perscitus puer, 'a very fine boy'; for similar use of scitus cf. Phor. 110, Pl. Merc. 4. 4. 15. Its more common sense is 'witty, clever, sensible,' cf. Pl. Triu. 764. Ecastor is commonly used by women, edefol by men; cf. 305 note. Mecastor is also found, in which case me is acc. of ego, as in mehercle, medius fidius.

488. quom, 'since, because,' is sometimes constructed with the indicative in ante-Augustan writers; cf. infra 623, 771, Phorm. 208, Pl. As. 80-1. In this case it is co-ordinate with quandoquidem, which is regularly followed by the indicative, and this may have influenced the construction.

489. vel, 'for example.' This meaning probably arose from an ellipse of a former alternative; 'either other instances might be given or this'; cf. Hec. 60, Haut. 568.

credat is a potential subj. Cf. 135 note.

abs was a collateral form of ab (cf. ℓn , $\ell \xi$) used before words beginning with ℓ , q, t. As early however as Plautus abs is rarely found except before te. Cicero always wrote abs te up to about 55 B.C. Occasional uses of abs in later authors, e.g. Livy, are probably intentional archaisms. In as-pello, as-porto, as-pernor (for as-pernor), the b has fallen out. Cf. Pl. Pers. 1, 3, 79, abs chorago, Adel. 254 abs quivis.

490. coram, used adverbially. No writer before Cicero employs oram as a preposition. Cf. 900.

opus facto, also in 715. Cf. 523 farato opus, Liv. 8. 13 maturato opus est, Cie. Mil. 19. 49 properato opus.

puerperae, dat. commodi.

492. itan . . . itane. Cf. 189 for a similarly emphatic repetition. tandem, often used in indignant or excited questions. Cf. infra 875, Phor. 231, Pl. Trin. 642, ib. 987.

idoneus, used as antecedent to quem, where is more commonly appears in classical prose. Cf. 757.

494. saltem accurate, sc. me falle.

495. edixin tibi? = nonne edixi tibi? Cf. 17 note, 238 note, 504.

496. interminatus sum, an intensive of minari, only found in Plautus and Terence.

497. credon, etc., a sarcastic question implying 'do you suppose that I believe,' etc.?

49S. teneo, 'I see.' Cf. 300.

499. quid credas? repeats Simo's credon, and so is virtually dependent on regas understood. Cf. 191 note.

quasi. Cf. 372.

500. mihin quisquam. sc. renuntiavit?

tute. The emphatic particle -te is only affixed to tu and te. In tutemet, Haut. 374, it is found in conjunction with another emphasising particle—met.

501. qui. Cf. 6 note.

istaec, feminine of istic, a form of iste strengthened by demonstrative affix -cc, as in hic, hacc, hoc, and illic, illacc, illuc, or illoc.

503. certe enim, 'most assuredly.' Cf. 91 note.

non etiam = nondum. Cf. 116 note.

504. egon te? sc. pernovi. Cf. 495 for use of -ne.

505. dari verba. Cf. 211.

falso? 'am I wrong in thinking so?' This word is often given to Davos, but dari verba falso seems an absurd phrase, while it has much force in Simo's mouth.

507. setius, a comparative form of secus [root sec- or seq- in sequor]: nilo setius=' nevertheless.'

508. ut sis seiens, for tit scias. Cf. 775. This is an early instance of the tendency of Latin, as of other languages, to become 'analytic:' i.e. to express changes of case, tense, mood, voice, etc. by the addition of separate words, e.g. prepositions, auxiliary verbs, etc., instead of by case-endings or verbal terminations, etc. This latter method is called 'synthetic.' Greek is a good example of a 'synthetic 'language, English of an 'analytic' language. Instances of this 'analytic' tendency are found in Euripides, and frequently in Hellenistic Greek.

510. prorsus [deriv. fro-versus], also found in the collateral forms frorsum and frosus. The comic writers use all these forms, classical authors only prorsus. In post-Augustan times an adjective prorsus-a-um came into use, and frorsa or frosa oratio, and later frosa as a substantive gained the meaning of 'prose.' Cf. Quin. 1. 8. 2, etc.

512. qui = quibus. Cf. 6.

513. postquam is often used with historic present instead of the ordinary perfect.

514. ilico, from in-loco, as Gr. $\alpha \dot{\nu} \tau \dot{\nu} \theta \epsilon \nu$, 'on the spot,' used here of time, as in 125.

515. arcessitum...ut adferret. Notice the change of construction from the supine to ut with subj.

516. This line is a quotation in oratio recta of Glycerium's reason for her action.

moventur=perturbantur. Cf. 921.

517. quid ais? Cf. 137 note.

quom = quo tempore. The use of the indicative implies that in Simo's opinion the reporting of the matter to Pamphilus ought to have been simultaneous with its discovery.

518. capere, sc. Glycerium.

519. igitur is often used in questions like the English 'then,' cf. 598. The sense is, 'Who then did induce him to give her up, if not I?'

521. id negoti, i.e. to break up Pamphilus' connection with Glycerium; cf. 2 note.

idem emphasises the opposition of mihi and tu. 'Do you for your part none the less persevere, as you are doing, in bringing about this match.'

523. parato opus. Cf. 490 note.

527. Chremem. Cf. 247 note.

528. gnato, dat. commodi. Cf. Pl. Trin. 611 ultro venit Philto oratum filio.

529. alias, 'at another time:' rare in this sense in the comic writers; once in Plautus, Curc. 63; twice in Terence, here and Hec. 80.

532. atque adeo, 'and indeed:' cf. 162 note. Adeo is thus used with conjunctions, especially si, sive, aut, vel; cf. 440, 977, Hec. 524, Cic. Att. 1. 17. 9. Cf. Gr. $\kappa a \lambda \mu \dot{\eta} \nu$.

in ipso tempore, 'at the nick of time;' cf. 758 veni in tempore, 783 per tempus advenis, 974.

eccum. Eccc is found in Plautus and Terence combined with various cases of is, ille, and iste, e.g. eccam, eccos, eccas, ecca, eccillum (which is sometimes contracted into ellum), eccistam. Eccum sometimes stands alone, as in 580, 957, sometimes is followed by an accusative, as here. Cf. 855.

ACT III. SCENE 3.

Chremes enters on his way to Simo's house, in consequence of a report which has reached his ears that his daughter is to be married to Pamphilus on that very day. He is in no good humour, but Simo manages to talk him over, and Chremes agrees to the match on the assurance that Pamphilus has really broken off all connexion with Glycerium, a statement which Davos is summoned to corroborate.

533. iubeo Chremetem. The full phrase is found Adel. 460 salvere Hegionem plurimum iubeo. For Chremetem, see 247 note.

optato, used as an adverb. Cf. 807 auspicato.

534. aliquot is also used by Cicero as a nominative without a substantive, Pis. 38.

535. viso, 'I come to see.'

id, is explained by the words tune an illi insaniant, and would not be translated by a separate word.

536. paucis. Cf. 29.

quid ... velim et quod ... quaeris. For this change of construction see 273 note, 650.

538. per te deos. Cf. 834. In this sense fer is often separated from its object.

Chreme, cf. 247 note.

541. quoius is scanned as one syllable.

543. ne... obseera. Donatus notes this construction, in place of ne with the subjunctive, as a Graecism; a direct translation of $\mu\dot{\eta}$ $\lambda\iota\tau\dot{\alpha}\nu\epsilon\nu\epsilon$. Cf. 384, 868.

546. in rem, 'to the advantage;' cf. Pl. Trin. 628, 748, Capt. 398. In the same sense cx re, Pl. Ps. 338. Ob rem is found = 'with advantage, usefully,' Phorm. 526. In the opposite sense ab rc, 'to the disadvantage,' Pl. Trin. 238.

556. ante eamus, 'prevent.' Cf. antevenire, Pl. Trin. 911.

557. eius, scanned as one syllable; ef. 541.

558. harum, sc. Glycerium, Mysis, Archilis.

559. redducunt. The Ind. probably indicates Simo's conviction that Pamphilus will, otherwise, relent. The spelling is confirmed by Lucretius, who lengthens the first syllable, and appears as a correction in A.

animum aegrotum. Cf. 193.

560, consuctudine. This word is specially used of lovers' relations to each other; cf. 110, 279, 439.

561. liberali, as opposed to a connection with a percgrina like Glycerium.

562. dein is used here like Gr. εἶτα.

sese emersurum, 'will extricate himself.' Emergere is occasionally used in a transitive sense; cf. Nep. Att. 11.1 quibus ex malis ut se emersit. The perf. part. is used by Cicero, Livy, Ovid, and Tacitus in a middle sense, e.g. Cic. Div. 2. 68, tibi subito sum visus emersus e flumine. The verb is found in its ordinary sense, Eun. 555.

563-4. The compressed style of these lines causes some obscurity. After posse must be understood se emergere, and posse must be supplied both before habere and perpeti. In 564, illum, sc. Pamphilus, is the subject, hanc, sc. Philumena, is the object. Translate, 'but I do not think that he can extricate himself, nor that he can be always faithful to her (sc. my daughter), nor that I can endure it' (sc. his unfaithfulness).

565. qui='how?'

istue and istoe, cf. Adel. 981, are used interchangeably as neut. sing. of istic; cf. 501 note.

567. nempe . . . denique, 'indeed at the worst.'

huc redit, 'comes to this,' i. e. as explained in next line.

569. si corrigitur. Notice the change of mood from si eveniat. Simo wishes to represent the former contingency as doubtful, the latter as probable as he can.

571. firmum, 'steady,' one who will not desert his wife.

572. quid istic ? 'well then,' lit. 'what should I do in that case?' a formula of assent after discussion. Cf. Adel. 133, 350, 956, Pl. Trin. 573.

induxti. For other syncopated forms, see 151 note. Inducerc animum or in animum, 'to resolve,' or 'to come to a conclusion,' are both found; cf. infra, 834, 883, Adel. 68, Hec. 603, Pl. Trin. 704.

573. in me claudier, 'should be impeded as far as I am concerned.' Cf. Eun. 164, Cic. de Off. 2, 15, 55.

claudier. Cf. 203 note.

575. sed quid ais ? 'but I say,' introducing a new point which had been forgotten. Cf. 137 note.

578. num censes faceret? 'Would he do it, do you suppose?' Censes is parenthetical, not influencing the construction; cf. 313, 314, Adel. 70.

579. tute adeo. Cf. 162 note.

580. atque eecum. Cf. 532 notc.

foras, an accusative pl. of the obsolete fora used as an adverb meaning 'motion out of doors;' so foris, the ablative, means 'rest out of doors.'

video exire, in later Latin would be video excuntem; cf. Pl. Capt. 1, Bacch. 403.

ACT III. SCENE 4.

Simo takes Davos into his confidence, and informs him of the successful issue of his negotiations with Chremes. Davos has much ado to conceal his consternation, and when left alone bitterly reproaches himself for his folly.

580. Plautus never begins a scene in the middle of a line as Terence here does.

581. advesperaseit. About sunset the bride was escorted by a festal procession from her father's house to her new home.

582. dudum, [deriv. diu-dum], 'some time ago,' i. e. 196-8. Cf. 948. In 591 and 840 dudum refers to the immediate past, 'just now.' In

Pl. Trin. 608 quam dudum?='how long ago?' Cf. Phorm. 459 incertior sum multo quam dudum, 583. volgus servorum, 'the common run of slaves,' Cf. Hec. 600 volgus mulierum. For the sentiment see Sen. Ep. 47. 3, eiusdem adrogantiae proverbium iactatur: 'totidem hostes esse quot servos.'

584. amat. Cf. 185.

facerem. Cf. 282 note.

585. adeo. Cf. 162 note.

586. fidem, his (sc. Chremes') promise.

587. non fuerant nuptiae futurae, 'the marriage was not to have taken place.' Davos, thinking that Simo is merely keeping up his former deception, does not at first believe that the match has been again arranged. Cf. 542-3.

ea gratia. Cf. 433 note.

588. vide! 'look at that!'

591. perimus, contracted from periimus, which some MSS read. Davos is beginning to fear that after all Simo may be telling him the truth.

dudum. Cf. 582 note.

593. optume. Davos cleverly substitutes optume as similar in sound to his startled exclamation occidi! which Simo half heard.

594. modo, 'directly.' This word is used by Plautus and Terence both of the present time, and of the immediate past: cf. Adel. 289, Pl. Ep. 5. 1. 43, Trin. 908, infra 612, 618.

ut adparetur dicam, 'I will give orders that preparation be made.' Adparetur is used impersonally, as in Eun. 583 dum adparatur, virgo in conclavi sedet. Dicam = edicam.

renuntio. The present is used to express the energy and speed of his movements: cf. Eun. 492-3 quae volo simul inperabo; postea continuo exco. Pl. Trin. 1109.

598. quiescas, lit. rest easy about it. Cf. Phor. 670 ego dabo; quiesce, ib. 713.

mirum ni. Cf. Pl. Trin. 861 mira sunt ni, ib. 495 mirum quin. 599. nullus sum, 'I am undone.' Cf. Phor. 179, ib. 942.

600. pistrinum. Cf. 199.

recta via. In this phrase via is more usually omitted. Cf. Phor. 859, Adel. 433.

602. conieci. Notice the energy of the word: 'I have pitch-forked.' Cf. 620.

erilem filium = eri filium. Cf. Pl. Trin. 602.

604. cm, seems to be used by the comic poets as =en, while hem expresses astonishment or other strong emotions.

astutias! accusative of exclamation. Davos is speaking with bitter ironv.

quod si quiessem, 'whereas had I kept quiet.' For quod si see 258 note.

605. eccum. Cf. 532 note.

606. aliquid, sc. a sword or spear on which he might fall.

ACT III. SCENE 5.

Pamphilus has just heard from Simo that Chremes has consented to his daughter's marriage. He comes on boiling with rage against Davos by whose advice this catastrophe has been brought about, and is only prevented from taking summary vengeance on the slave by the pressing necessity of his own position.

607. scelus qui. Cf. 250. The reading of this line is very doubtful. The MSS. read qui me perdidit, or qui me hodie perdidit. Neither reading will scan. Hodie was probably supplied from 620, and perdidit would be the natural gloss on the aposiopesis qui me... On the stage the sense would be completed by a gesture.

atque, 'and yet.' This adversative sense of atque is also found in 225, 525, 640, Adel. 40; though to escape the difficulty some editors alter the MSS. reading to atque.

608. nulli, for nullius. Pronouns forming the gen. and dat. in -ius and -i are occasionally declined by Terence like a regular adjective in -us-a-um; cf. alterae dat. fem. infra 983, Phorm. 928, Haut. 271, Eun. 1004 mihi solae. Nulli consiii is read also Cic. Rosc. 16. § 48.

609. me commisisse. Cf. 245.

futtili, [deriv. fundo, cf. futis, a water-vessel], lit. 'that which cannot contain,' thence worthless.

610. pretium ob stultitiam = pretium stultitiae. Cf. 138.

612. Cf. 252.

modo. Cf. 594 note.

613. ducere. For this use of the present for future inf. see 379, note.

audeam, deliberative subjunctive. Notice the near connexion of meaning between the future simple negaho and the present subjunctive audeam.

614. quid me faciam, 'what I shall do with myself.' Faccre, fieri, csse, in the sense of 'to do anything with a person,' anything to be done with or happen to a person,' are constructed with the ablative or dative without a preposition, or rarely with de and the ablative.

Cf. infra 700, Pl. Trin. 405 quid factumst co? Hor, Sat. 1, 1, 63 auid facias illi? Cic. Fam. 14. 4. 3 quid Tulliola mea fiet? Pl. Trin, 157 siguid co fuerit, Adel. 996 sed de fratre quid fiet?

nec quidem me, sc. quid faciam scio.

615. Cf. 313 note.

616. ehodum. Cf. 29 note. Note hiatus between sum and chodum.

618. nempe ut modo, 'as you did just now, I suppose.' Cf. 594 note. tibi ego ut credam. Cf. 263 note.

furcifer [deriv. furca-fero]. The Romans used sometimes to punish their slaves by placing on their necks a fork-shaped yoke to the two ends of which their hands were bound. In cases of grave offence the slave so pinioned was scourged, cf. Liv. 1. 26, ib. 2. 36, Cic. Div. 1. 26, 55; in more venial cases the slave was merely led round the neighbourhood as a warning. Cf. Pl. Pers. 5. 2. 71, Hor. Sat. 2. 7, 66. So furcifer came to denote a worthless slave.

610. restituas, a potential subjunctive.

em quo fretus sim! 'see what a fellow I have been relying on!' Fretus sim is virtually dependent on the verbal idea contained in em; cf. 604.

620. conjecisti. Cf. 602. Cf. Phor. 689 qui te ad scopulum e tran-quillo auferat.

621, an introduces the second member of a disjunctive sentence (interrogative or otherwise); the first may be suppressed, as here. The sense is, 'Was all this unexpected, or did I not say...' Cf. 386, 399.

dixti, syncopated form of dixisti; cf. 151 note.

622, sine ad me redeam. The imperative of sino is commonly followed by the subjunctive without ut; cf. 900. The ordinary construction after the indicative of sino is accusative and infinitive. Cf. Adel. 704 reprime iracundiam atque ad te redi.

ei mihi. Cf. 73, 263.

623. quom non habeo. Cf. 488 note.

624. praecavere mihi me, haud te ulcisci sinit. This is a case of Zeugma. The sense requires cogit or some similar word before praccavere.

te ulcisei, 'to take vengeance on you.'

ACT IV. SCENE 1.

Charinus enters, almost distracted by what he believes to be the selfish treachery of his friend. Pamphilus with difficulty vindicates his own sincerity, and diverts the wrath of Charinus on to Davos' head, who, though at his wit's end, engages to find some way out of the predicament.

625. The agitation of Charinus is expressed by the metre, line 625 being a daetylic tetrameter, and 626 to 634 Cretic tetrameters.

vecordia. The prefix ze- either negatives the positive idea of the simple word, as in ze-cors, ze-grandis, ve-iovis (an anti-Jove), or strengthens the simple word, as in ve-pallidus, ve-stigo.

ut siet. Cf. 263 note.

627. gaudeant . . . comparent. The plural verbs are used after the indefinite notion contained in quoiquam.

628. alterius. In the Cretic metre a doubtful syllable, which is commonly scanned short, is not unfrequently lengthened when it stands at the end of a foot; e. g. alterius, modo 630, ubi 631.

629. verum, 'right;' cf. Cic. Leg. 2. 5. 11 quod est rectum verum quoque est.

immo, 'yes indeed.' Immo more commonly contradicts what precedes, cf. 655, 700, but it is never used as an independent negative like minime. In all cases it introduces some important qualification: so, in the present case, the sense is, 'Ah, surely it cannot be true. Yes indeed . . .

630. modo . . . paulum, 'just a little while before.'

632. se aperiunt, 'they show themselves in their true light.'

633. The line is obscure and doubtful. Translate, 'they are ashamed to refuse the fulfilment of their promise, and yet circumstances press them to do so.' This gives a very unusual sense to premit, the reading of all the best MSS. but one; and many editors print cogit on the authority of D. It is however scarcely worth while to discuss an uncommon phrase in what is probably only a gloss.

635. quor meam tibi? 'why should I give up my bride to you?'

an elliptical phrase.

636. heus, an interjection commonly used to attract attention, e.g. heus tu; sometimes it is a mere emphatic exclamation, as here and Eun. 276.

proximus sum egomet mihi. A proverb like 'Number One comes first.' Cf. Pl. Trin. 1154 tunica propior palliost.

638. verentur, 'they have scruples.' Notice illic . . . ibi, a double antecedent to ubi. The MSS read hic ubi opust non verentur; illic ubi nil opust ibi verentur. This cannot be scanned, and is plainly a gloss.

639. agam . . . adeam, deliberative subjunctives.

expostulem? 'should I complain of?' cf. Adel. 595.

640. multa mala, i.e. multa maledicta, atque. Cf. 607 note.

641. morem gessero, 'I shall have gratified;' cf. Adel. 214, 431.

642. respiciunt, sc. nos; cf. Phor. 817 di nos respiciunt.

causa, 'excuse.' Charinus bitterly emphasises 'tandem.'

644. ducere. Cf. 180. postulas? 'do you expect?' cf. 331, 657.

645. complacita est, 'she pleased you also.' Complaceo is found in no writer of the Augustan age. A perfect active is found Pl. Rud. 727 Veneri hace complacuerunt; but the passive form is more common, cf. Haut. 773, Pl. Rud. 187.

646. spectavi, 'I judged.'

647. falsus's = falleris, 'you are wrong.'

The MSS. read nonne; cf. 238 note.

solidum gaudium, 'genuine joy;' cf. solidum beneficium, Eun. 871, infra 964, Pl. Trin. 850, 892.

648. lactasses. This is a frequentative formed from lacio, whence allicio; cf. oblecto. It means 'to cajole.' Lacto is also used 912, and in Pl. Cist. 2. 1. 9.

649. habeas. Cf. 889.

habeam. Cf. 191, 282, Pl. Trin. 133.

650. hic, δεικτικώς, i. e. pointing to Davos.

confecit; rather an uncommon use of the word, but cf. Haut. 1003. We should have expected a subjunctive corresponding to vorser. For a similar change cf. 273, 536, Pl. Most. 199. Donatus mentions another reading, conflavit.

651. de te. Ex is used instead of de, Adel. 416 ex aliis sumere exemplum sibi.

653. altercasti, ἄπαξ λεγύμενον in the active in classical Latin: altercatur is found as an impersonal passive in Justinian, but the classical usage is altercari as a deponent.

dudum, sc. in Act ii. Sc. 5; cf. 582 note. Charinus is of course speaking ironically.

655. immo etiam, 'no indeed;' cf. 629 note, 673, 708.

quo tu minus...meas. The sense is, 'And from what you say $(quo = ct \ co)$ you are quite ignorant of any troubles.'

656. haec. Cf. 328 note.

657. postulabat. Cf. 331, 644.

nunc, of course goes with dare.

660. enicas, [deriv. a Sanskrit root meaning 'to disappear,' whence Lat. neco, nex, Gr. νέκως, νεκρός]. Enico seems to be more correct than eneco.

661. The order is, 'ut dicerem patri (me) esse ducturum, sc. uxorem. Some of the good MSS. insert me before esse, but it spoils the metre.

662. suadere, orare, may be constructed after destitit, or may be taken as historical infinitives.

usque adeo . . . Cf. Pl. Cist. 2. 3. 40 instare usque adeo donec se adiurat anus.

663. quis homo istue, sc. fecit? For istue, cf. 565 note.

The readings of lines 663-4 are uncertain. The text follows the best MSS.

interturbat, 'he turns everything upside down;' a rare word; cf. Pl. Bacch. 733 ne interturba.

664. qui auscultaverim, 'because I listened to him.'

665. scelus. Cf. 607.

Notice the hiatus between factum and hem. It is sufficiently accounted for by the change of speakers; see Introduction on Metres.

666. at is often used in curses and passionate exclamations; cf. Eun. 431, Hec. 134, Pl. Most. 655, Verg. A. 2, 535. It is rarely used in blessing or entreaty; cf. Pl. Pers. 4, 3, 18, Verg. A. 8, 572.

duint, archaic for dent, as ferduint for perdant; cf. Phor. 519, 976, 1005. Terence also uses duin, duit, Hec. 134, Phor. 713. Plautus employs all the following, duin, duis or duas, duit, duint.

667. coniectum. Cf. 602, 620.

670. successit, used impersonally.

671. processit = successit, cf. 679, Adel. 897. Notice the alliteration.

673. immo etiam. Cf. 629 note, 655, 709.

satis credo is parenthetical; cf. 313 note.

675. pro servitio, lit. 'conformably to my position as slave,' i. e. 'as a slave.' For a similar sense of pro cf. Phor. 195 satis pro inferio, Adel. 427 pro mea sapientia, and often in Cicero, Livy, etc.

676. manibus pedibus. Cf. 161. Notice the asyndeton, cf. 680, i. e. omission of a conjunction, followed by the polysyndeton, i. e. redundance of conjunctions in noctesque et dies. This gives great emphasis to the sentence. Cf. Adel. 64.

677. dum, 'if only.' Sometimes dum is thus used without a verb following, e.g. Phor. 526 minume dum ob rem.

680. vel, used as an intensive particle with the imperative; cf. Phor. 143.

missum face. For the phrase cf. infra 833, Eun. 90. Face = fac is frequent in Plautus and Terence, e. g. infra 712, 821, 833, Pl. Trin, 800, etc. Notice the blunt turn given to the sentence by the asyndeton.

681. The sense is, 'I want to devise something better for myself: do you restore me to the position wherein you found me.'

682. concrepuit ostium. Greek doors opened outwards, and so it was customary on leaving a house to knock against the door as a warning to persons in the street. The door was said crepare, concrepare, Gr. ψοφεῦν; cf. Phor. 840. The visitor was said fellere, κόπτεω, κρούεω, Adel. 638, 788; or, if violent, pulsare, fullare, ἀράσσεων. Adel. 633, 637. Davos is naturally delighted at this interruption, which gives him a little more time, while Pamphilus impatiently tries to keep him to the point.

683. nil ad te, sc. attinct.

nuneine = num-ce-ne; cf. sicine, 689. The sense is, 'are you now at last beginning to think?'

inventum dabo. Cf. 684, 703. Greek writers have a similar use of a participle with $\tau i\theta \eta \mu$; e.g. Aesch. Ag. 32 τὰ δεσποτῶν γὰρ εἶν πεσύντα θήσομαι.

ACT IV. SCENE 2.

Mysis is reassured by Pamphilus, who swears eternal fidelity to Glycerium. Davos devises a new plot.

684. ubi ubi = ubicumque, is very rare: ef. Eun. 1042.

inventum curabo et adductum. Cf. 683. 688. integrascit, is ἄπαξ λεγόμενον.

689. sicine. Cf. 683 note. For accusative and infinitive in indignant questions, see 245 note.

691. quibus, sc. nuptiis.

potuerat quiesei, used impersonally; quiesei being followed by the ablative. 'And how easily could this have been kept quiet, if he had kept quiet.' Note the combined alliteration and assonance.

hie. pointing to Davos, δεικτικώς, as so often in Comedy.

603. Mysis refers to the last words of Pamphilus, 690.

694. adiuro is followed here and Hec. 268-9 by accusative and infinitive, in Pl. Bacch. 777, by ut and subjunctive: the former construction is usual in later Latin.

696. contigit, sc. hace, 'she became mine.'

valeant, 'away with those who..;' cf. Adel. 622: $\chi \alpha i \rho \epsilon \iota \nu$ is similarly used.

698. resipisco, 'I recover myself, breathe again.' In Haut. 843-4 to intellego resipisse means, 'I see that you have come to your senses again.'

non Apollinis, etc. Other instances of the Delphic oracle alluded to as the standard of certainty are found in Pl. Pseud. 480, Lucr. 1. 736, Cic. Ep. ad Brut. 1. 1. 6.

atque for quam after comparatives is sometimes found in negative sentences, e. g. Pl. Merc. 897, Cas. 5. 1. 7; later poets, especially Horace, use atque thus, even in affirmative sentences: e. g. Hor. Epod. 15. 5.

699. ut ne=nt non, to signify a negative result, e. g. Pl. Trin. 105. Cf. Hec. 595, Eun. 942. Cicero occasionally, Livy twice, Caesar never uses ut ne=ne: Horace has quo ne, Sat. 2. 1. 37. For qui ne=ut ne see 335; for ut ne=ne see 258.

701. in proclivi, 'easy:' cf. Pl. Capt. 336 tam hoc quidem tibi in proclivist, quam imber est, quando pluit.

702. quis videor? 'What do you think of me?' Pamphilus is expecting some applause for his heroic resolve, an expectation somewhat damped by his friend's depressing reply.

Notice that the final syllable of ego, as of tibi 703, and cedo 705, is considered as long when standing at the end of the fourth foot in a septenarius. See Introduction on Metres.

703. Pamphilus lays sneering emphasis on conere; hence Davos' rejoinder.

effectum reddam. Cf. 683 note.

704. quin, a corroborative particle, 'yes, indeed:' cf. 45 note.

ne erres. Davos wishes to be clearly understood that his plan is merely to frustrate the match proposed by Simo for Pamphilus, not to procure the bride for Charinus.

707. vos amolimini, 'pack yourselves off:' amoliri is not found elsewhere in Terence, though Plautus uses it six times.

708. ego hane vísam. Notice the scansion: see Introduction on Metres.

quo hinc te agis? 'where are you going to?' se agere, 'to betake oneself,' 'to come,' 'to go,' is a common phrase in Plautus, e.g. Trin. 1078. Terence uses it here only, Vergil in A. 6. 337, 8. 465, 9.696.

709. quid me fiet? Cf. 614 note.

710. dieculam, a diminutive of dies, found here only in Terence, and but once in Plautus: used by Cicero.

711. quantum = $\ddot{o}\sigma o\nu$.

promoveo, 'I put off,' not elsewhere found in this sense in any author. Terence uses promoveo in only three other places, and always as 'to accomplish:' cf. supra 640, Eun. 913, Hec. 703.

quid ergo? 'what do you say?' Ergo is used thus in Plautus and Terence to make a question more emphatic: cf. Pl. Trin. 988, Ch. Ipsus, inquam, Charmides sum? Sy. Ergo ipsusne es? ib. 901: infra 850 tihi ergo.

712. ut ducam. Supply id age or some similar phrase.

face. Cf. 680 note.

siquid poteris, sc. pro me efficere.

713. age, 'all right.' Compare the Old English 'go to.'

714. dum exeo. Cf. 329 note.

715. factost opus. Cf. 490 note.

ACT IV. SCENE 3.

Mysis left alone is startled by the appearance of Davos with Glycerium's baby. Davos bids her lay the infant at Simo's door, when the unexpected approach of Chremes introduces a new complication.

716. nilne esse . . . Cf. 245 note.

proprium = Gr. βέβαιον, cf. Menander, Monost. 655 βέβαιον οὐδὲν ἐν βίω δοκεῖ πέλειν: infra 960, Vergil E. 7. 31 si proprium hoc fuerit, where see Conington's note, Cic. Man. 16, &c.

di, vostram fidem, 'heaven help us.' The full phrase, di, obsecro vostram fidem, 'Ye gods, I implore your aid,' is found Pl. Amph. 1130 and elsewhere. Fides means originally 'confidence;' then that which produces confidence, 'truth, promise:' then a promise given to a suppliant, i. e. 'aid,' 'protection:' cf. 237 note, 246.

718. amicum ... Notice the climax. Cf. 295.

loco, 'vicissitude.'

720. facile. We have a similar use of 'easily' in colloquial language. Notice that facile is regularly used as an adverb: faciliter is not classical.

hic . . . illic, 'now . . . then.'

723. exprompta malitia, 'ready craft:' so Pl. Ep. 4. I. 19 muliebris adhibenda malitia nunc est. Several MSS. read memoria for malitia.

724. ocius, 'with all speed.' This comparative is not unfrequently so used: e. g. infra 731, Phor. 562.

726. humine. Mysis naturally hesitates to lay a new-born infant on the cold stones of the street.

ex ara. Two altars used to stand at the front of the Roman stage, one on the right sacred to Dionysus in tragedy and Apollo in comedy, one on the left to the god or goddess in whose honour the festival was celebrated; in this case to Magna Mater or Cybele. See note on the title. An altar also stood at the entrance of every Roman house.

verbenas, the boughs of the sacred trees, such as laurel, olive, myrtle, with which altars were wreathed. Such boughs were borne by Fetiales and suppliant priests: they were also used in sacrificial and other rites. Cf. Verg. E. 8. 65, ib. A. 12. 120, and Conington's notes on these passages. Donatus gives the derivation 'verbenae quasi herbenae.' Servins on Verg. E. 8. 65 gives 'a viriditate.'

728. ad erum iurandum mihi. The MSS. have iusiurandum, against the metre, a reading rejected by all editors from Donatus downwards. It seems on the whole best to consider iurandum to be for iurandum esse, an impersonal gerundive constructed after opus sit; and to take ad herum as = apiud herum; cf. Pl. Cist. 1. I. 100 iuravit apiud matrem meam. Translate, 'if by chance it may be necessary for me to take an oath before my master.' R. Klotz thinks that iurandum is put for iurare by a sort of attraction. Others consider that iurandum here iusiurandum, quoting Pl. Cist. 2. 1. 26, but the reading in that passage is very doubtful, and such an ellipse would be against all analogy, though the construction would in that case find a parallel in 740. Bentley and others evade the difficulty by reading iurato.

729. liquido, is one of a fairly numerous class of ablatives used as adverbs, e.g. continuo, crebro, serio, etc. Cf. 533.

730. religio, 'scruple.'

istaec. Cf. 501 note.

731. ocius. Cf. 724. Construe porro with agam.

732. pro Iuppiter. Cf. 237 note.

733. consilium. Davos had probably intended to tell Simo that the baby had been laid at his door.

735-6. 'See that you support my story with a word or two, whenever necessary.'

738. quod mea opera opus sit vobis, 'wherein my aid may be needed by you:' quod is an acc. of respect; cf. 289. For opus with a personal construction, see 740.

aut is the MSS. reading which most editors have altered to ut, needlessly. The sense is, 'if there is anything which I can do, or if you see any further reason (i.e. to make my presence desirable), I will remain.'

ACT IV. Scene 4.

An amusing scene follows. Davos, pretending to know nothing about the matter, bullies Mysis into saying before Chremes that the baby belongs to Pamphilus, while giving her contradictory orders apart, till the poor old woman becomes almost distracted. Chremes at once resolves to break off the match.

740. quae opus fuere ad nuptias. Cf. 728, 738 notes.

744. di vostram fidem. Cf. 237, 716 note.

745. illi, archaic for illic, found in Plautus, Terence, and perhaps Vergil G. 1. 54, 1. 251, 3. 17: here required by the metre.

quid hominum litigant, 'what a lot of people have eases on.' Cf. Pl. Poen. 3. 3. 5, sed quid hie tantum hominum incedunt? A similar constructio κατὰ σύνεσιν is often found after pars, quisque, uterque, etc., e. g. Pl. Trin. 35 faciunt pars hominum.

746. annona carast, 'prices are high.' Annona, from annus, means (1) the yearly produce; (2) food, especially corn; (3) the price of grain or other food; (4) the market. Cf. Pl. Trin. 484 cena hac annona est sine sacris hereditas.

747. quae haec est fabula? 'what farce is this?' For fabula, 'a comedy,' see Prologue 3 and 16; 'a story,' 925; fabulac, 'stuff and nonsense,' 224.

749. rogites. Subjunctive with causal relative.

752-3. verbum si . . . faxis. Cf. 178, 860. For faxis cf. 854 note.

754. male dieis? 'do you abuse me?' referring to deliras.

die clare, 'speak up;' i. c. so that Chremes may hear.

757. adeon videmur, etc. Cf. 492. For adeo cf. 162 note.

758. in quibus inludatis, a construction not found elsewhere. Terence uses inludere in three other places with the direct accusative, infra 822, Phorm. 915 satis superbe inluditis me, Haut. 741; once with in and acc., Eun. 942. Cicero uses both these constructions and also the dative, which latter construction is also found in Vergil and Tacitus. Its usual meaning is 'to make game of,' so 'to stake,' as in 822; very rarely 'to sport with,' as in Hor. Sat. 1. 4. 139.

in tempore. Cf. 532.

759. adeo has an intensive force, 'make all haste.' Cf. 162 note.

760. excessis = cxccsscris. Notice manē, cave. Cf. Introduction on Metres.

761. di te eradicent, more emphatic than di te perdant. The same phrase is found Haut. 589; and eradicare is used several times by Plautus, but by no other classical author.

762. at, expressing indignation. Cf. 666 note.

763. quoium. This interrogative pronoun is not uncommon in the comic writers, e. g. infra 932, Pl. Trin. 45 quoia hic vox prope me sonat?

but is rare elsewhere, though found Verg. E. 3. 1 dic mihi, Damoeta, cuium pecus? ib. E. 5. 87.

765. vostri, sc. eri.

768. quemne, 'what? the one which?' Cf. Phor. 923 argentum rursum iube rescribi, Phormio. Ph. quodne ego discripsi porro . . .

769. O hominem audacem. Notice the hiatus after O. Cf. infra 817, Adel. 183, 304.

770. suffarcinatam, 'with a bundle under her cloak.'

771. aliquot adfuerunt liberae. The evidence of slaves was not received at Athens except under torture, and at Rome no slave could give evidence against his master except in special cases. Cf. Phor. 292-3 servom hominem causam orare leges non sinunt, neque testimoni dictiost. For the indicative after quom, 'because.' cf. supra 488 note, 623.

772. ne. Cf. 324 note.

775. nunc adeo. Cf. 162 note.

ut sis sciens. Cf. 508 note.

777. provolvam teque pervolvam, 'I will tumble him over, and roll you along.'

778-9. fallacia, etc. . . . 'one trick treads on the heels of another.'

780. See 220 sqq.

781. eam is contracted into one syllable and then cut off. See Introduction on Metres.

782. iocularium in malum, 'into a ludicrous scrape,' Cf. Phor. 134 iocularem audaciam. Iocularium is ἄπαξ λεγόμενον.

783. per tempus = in tempore, 532, 758.

787. hic, δεικτικωs, pointing to Chremes.

non in poetry and late prose is occasionally used for ne, although Quintilian 1. 5. 50 mentions it as a solecism. Cf. Verg. A. 12. 78 non Teucros agat in Rutulos; Hor. S. 2. 5. 91 non ctiam sileas. In like manner neque is sometimes used for neve even by Cicero and Quintilian, who, in spite of his condemnation of non feceris 1. 5. 50, himself writes non desperenus 7. 1. 56, and non assuescal 2. 16. 6. Cf. Mad. § 456. obs. 2, and § 459. In the present case the fact that the negation really belongs to Davom may have suggested the use of non.

789. ne me attigas. Attigere, the older form of attingere, is not found in any later author than Terence. Plautus uses it several times, but in all certain cases in 2nd pers. of pres. subj. in prohibitions.

790. Mysis was going to finish her sentence with some such words as narrabo, percam, 792. socer, i.e. sponsae pater. Cf. 732. A similar proleptic use of gener and adfinis may be found in Pl. Trin. 422, 622, Verg. A. 2. 344.

793. praediceres, 'you should have told me before.' This is really an apodosis, a protasis such as si recte faceres being suppressed. Cf. 138. Such a use of the imperf. for the pluperf. is an idiom often found in the best authors; sometimes even the pres. subj. is substituted for an imperf. or pluperf. Cf. Mad. § 347. obs. 1, 2, 3.

794-5. Translate, 'do you suppose it makes little difference whether all your acts are sincere and natural, or all premeditated?'

Davos means that Mysis would certainly have betrayed herself had she attempted to act a part; the only chance was to keep her in the dark, so that she could speak and act naturally.

796. platea, 'a street.' Gr. ή πλατεῖα ὁδός. In spite of the derivation the scansion is flatča. Cf. Pl. Trin. 840, Hor. Ep. 2. 2. 71 purae sunt flateae, Cat. 15. 7.

799. lege. By a law of Solon the property of a person dying intestate passed to the nearest of kin. Cf. Aristoph. Av. 1660 sqq. Property was said lege redire ad aliguem, testamento venire. Cf. Hec. 171-2.

800. obseero, 'heaven help us.' Cf. Eun. 963.

801. sobrinus, contracted from sovorinus, properly a mother's sister's child, i. e. a first cousin on the mother's side.

803. itan Chrysis—? 'is Chrysis really—?' Crito avoids the illomened word 'dead' by a discreet afosiofesis, and a slight cough.

nos . . . miseras perdidit, 'she has left us poor souls disconsolate.'

804. The verbs to be supplied are, 'quid vos agitis? quo pacto hic vivitis? satine recte valetis?

sie, 'so so.' Cf. Phor. 145 quid rei gerit? G. sic, tenuiter.

805. This proverb is found among the fragments of Menander, ζωμεν γὰρ οὐχ ὡς θέλομεν ἀλλ' ὡς δυνάμεθα, and still earlier in Plato, Hipp. Mai. 301. Caecilius used it before Terence in a Latin dress, 'vivas ut possis, quando non quis ut velis,' and Plautus alludes to it Pers. 1. 1. 17. Latin writers introduce a proverb by aiunt. Cf. Phor. 506, 768.

ACT IV. SCENE 5.

At this point appears Crito, a relation of Chrysis, and her heir-at-law. He is much perturbed at hearing that Glycerium has not discovered her parents.

807. utinam, 'would that she had.' Cicero is rather fond of using utinam elliptically, especially after quod.

an is often found in a question apparently simple, but which must be regarded as the second member of an alternative question, the former being inferred from the context. An nondum ctiam? is here the second member of iam hic suos farentis refferit?

auspicato. Cf. 533, 729 notes.

adpuli, the reading of all the best MSS., has been altered on very slender authority to attuli by Fleekeisen. Crito had come by sea, and navem adpellere was a common phrase.

808. tetulissem. Cf. 832 tetulit. These reduplicated tenses of fero are not found elsewhere in Terence, but are not uncommon in Plautus: tetulerunt is once used by Lucretius, 6. 672. These forms are from a root tol-, or tul-, found in $\tau\lambda\hat{\eta}\nu\alpha\iota$, $\tau\dot{\alpha}\lambda\alpha s$, tollo, tolerare. (t) latus.

811. lites sequi. Gr. δίκην διώκειν. Cf. Adel. 248, Phor. 408. quam . . . utile. This is, of course, ironical.

814. grandinscula, ἄπαξ λεγόμενον, 'pretty well grown up.' This is read by all MSS., but some editors alter it to grandicula to avoid the synizesis. Cf. Haut. 515 tardiusculus.

clamitent, 'people would cry out,' a potential subjunctive. This use of the indefinite plural is not usual; an impersonal construction is far more common.

815. sycophantam. By Athenian law successful prosecutors of public offenders received rewards, often half the penalty, political jealousy always gave support to an accusation, and wealthy citizens were often ready to avert vexatious proceedings by a substantial payment.

All this encouraged the growth of an unscrupulous class of men who made their livelihood by laying informations, extorting money under threats of so doing, and similar disreputable practices.

These men were called $\sigma \nu \kappa o \phi \acute{a} \nu \tau a i$. Their name was derived from $\sigma \widetilde{\nu} \kappa o s$, a fig, and $\phi a \acute{a} \nu \epsilon \nu v$, to lay information, because an ancient law against the exportation of figs, though unrepealed, became practically obsolete, and consequently prosecutions under it were considered peculiarly vexatious. By an easy transition, a sycophant came to mean a swindler or pettifogger of any description. See infra 919, Pl. Trin. iv. sc. 2, Aristoph. Achar. 818, Aves 1410, Plut. 850.

816. non lubet, i.e. Crito's own good feeling would prevent him.

817. Notice the hiatus in O optume, as in 769.

antiquom obtines, 'you keep old-fashioned honesty'; an elliptical phrase. Cf. Hec. 860 ac tu ecastor moremantiquom atque ingenium obtines. For similar uses of antiquos cf. Adel. 442, Pl. Trin. 72, 381, Most. 989, etc.

819. nolo me videat senex, 'I don't want the old man (sc. Simo) to see me.' Nolo with this construction is very rare, though volo followed by the subj. is common enough.

ACT V. SCENE 1.

Simo in vain tries to persuade Chremes that the story about Glycerium and her baby is only part of a plot to break off the match.

$20. spectata, 'proved.'

face. Cf. 680 note, 833.

822. inlusi vitam filiae, 'staked my daughter's life.' Cf. 758 note.

823. immo enim, 'nay indeed.' Enim is here intensive; cf. 91 note.

824. dudum, 'a little while ago'; cf. 582 note.

825. prae studio, 'from your eagerness.'

826. eogitas, etc., 'you consider neither the bounds of my compliance, nor the bearing of your request.' For the mixed construction see 40-50.

827. remittas. 'vou would cease'; cf. 904 mitte orare.

$28. at. Cf. 666 note.

829. re uxoria. A common periphrasis; cf. res divina, res rustica, res frumentaria, etc.

830. seditionem. Cf. Cic. Att. 2. 1. 5 ca est enim seditiosa, ca cum viro bellum gerit.

incertas, because a divorce might be feared at any moment.

831. eius. Notice the emphatic repetition. It is scanned as one syllable.

labore. Cf. 720 note.

832. tetulit. For the meaning cf. 188, for the form cf. 808 notes. feras, 'be content,' lit. 'bear with it.'

833. hinc civem, i.e. an Athenian citizen; cf. 908.

missos face. Cf. 680 note, 821.

834. per ego te deos oro. For the separation of per from its case cf. supra 538, Verg. A. 4. 314, 12. 56, Liv. 23. 9. 2, etc.

ut ne. Cf. 250 note.

illis. sc. Glycerium and her attendants.

credere. The subj. with ut or ne is used after animum inducere, as well as the inf., both by the comedians and by Cicero.

835. illum, sc. Pamphilus.

836. nuptiarum gratia, 'on account of the marriage,' i.e. to break

838. ea causa quam ob rem. Cf. 382.

840. facturas, sc. Glycerium and her servants. dudum praedixit. Cf. 507, 582 note.

ACT V. SCENE 2.

Davos, unaware of the presence of Simo and Chremes, comes out of Glycerium's house. In his confusion he mentions that Pamphilus is now with her, and to shield himself tells Chremes of Crito's assertion that Glycerium is an Athenian citizen. Simo, in a fury, shouts for Dromo, the slave who flogged for the household, by whom Davos is carried off bodily for summary punishment. Simo summons Pamphilus from the house.

S42. nunciam. Cf. 171 note.

em Davom tibi, 'see you Davos there'; tibi is Ethic dative. Cf. Eun. 472 cm Eunuchum tibi, Pl. Trin. 185 cm meam avaritiam tibi. For cm cf. 604 note.

843. hospitis, sc. Crito.

845. in vado. Cf. 480, ego in portu navigo.

848. arcesse, 'send for them,' sc. the bridal party; cf. 581.

bene sane, 'mighty fine.'

id enim, etc., 'that certainly is all that's wanted now'; enim is intensive, cf. 91, 206 notes.

hine, lit. 'from present circumstances;' cf. Pl. Epid. 1. 1. 25 at unum a practura tua abest.

849. etiam tu hoc responde. This reading is kept in deference to the MSS, and Servius. Many editors adopt the reading of Donatus respondes, because etiam is so often used with impatient questions, e.g. Adel. 550 etiam taces? Phor. 542 etiam tu hinc abis? etc. The imperative is however found with etiam, Hec. 841, Pl. Most. 2. 2. 43, etc.

istic, δεικτικώς, pointing to Glycerium's house.

est. For the indicative cf. 45 note.

ita, 'yes.' An affirmative answer may also be expressed by etiam, vero, verum, sane, factum; or by repeating the verb, e.g. hoc facies? faciam; or by a pronoun, e.g. hoc facies? ego vero.

850. tibi ergo, 'yes you': ergo is more commonly used as an emphatic particle in questions, cf. 711 note.

quam dudum. Cf. 582 note.

852. dixti. Cf. 151 note.

853. quid illum censes? 'what do you think he would be doing?' This phrase probably originated in an ellipse of facere; cf. Adel. 656 quid ifsae? quid aiunt? Mi. quid illas censes? Pl. Trin. 811 quid illum futas? For illustration of this sarcasm see 552.

854. immo vero. Davos replies to Chremes' sneer by representing Pamphilus as present in Glycerium's house to interview Crito, whom faxo = fecero. A future perfect is often used in Plautus and Terence to express a quickly completed future action, where in English we should employ the future simple. Faxo in Terence is found four times with the fut. ind., cf. Phor. 308 iam faxo hic aderit, ib. 1055, Eun. 285, 663, twice with the pres. subj., cf. Adel. 209 cupide accipite faxo. ib. 847 coquendo sit faxo, following the subj. in both cases. Here the MSS. read audias, but several editors have altered it to audies. There is no certain instance of the fut. after faxo in Plautus, and the Augustan writers invariably use the subjunctive construction.

855. ellum. Cf. 532 note, Pl. Trin. 622.

confidens, 'audacious'; commonly used, as here, in a bad sense. Cf. Phor. 122-3 est parasitus quidam Phormio, homo confidens.

catus, 'shrewd,' like confidens, can be used in both a good and a bad sense.

857. tristis veritas, 'a stern honesty.'

860. Spengel scans this line as trochaic, beginning $Dr\'om\~o$, cf. 760. In Roman households the slave whose special duty it was to flog others was called lorarius.

861. sublimem hune intro rape, 'up with him and carry him in.' Cf. Adel. 316 sublimem medium arriperem, Pl. Mil. Gl. 1394. In these and other passages some editors read sublimen, an adverb, against the MSS.

quantum potest. Cf. 327 note. The impersonal use of potest in this and similar phrases is so general that we have admitted it here on the authority of Donatus.

864. commotum reddam, 'I will have you touched up.' Cf. 683 note.

tamen etsi = tametsi in later Latin.

865. quadrupedem constringito, 'bind him hand and foot.' At Athens a refractory slave sometimes had his neck thrust into a wooden collar, $\kappa \dot{\nu} \phi \omega \nu$, and his hands and feet tied together like a calf.

868. et illi, sc. Pamphilo ostendam quid sit perieli fallere patrem. ne saevi. Cf. 543 note.

869. pietatem gnati! 'my undutiful son.' Acc. of exclamation. Cf. 876, 948, 956.

870. For the infinitive cf. 245 note.

ACT V. SCENE 3.

Simo bitterly upbraids his son, accusing him, moreover, of having suborned Crito. Pamphilus begs to be allowed to clear himself by fetching Crito.

872. quis me volt. Cf. 29 note.

874. gravius, 'too hard.'

possiet. Cf. 234 note.

876. O ingentem confidentiam, 'O monstrous impudence!' Cf. 855, 860 notes.

879. adeo inpotenti esse animo, 'to be of a disposition so uncontrollable.' Notice, however, that adeo qualifies the whole sentence, not inpotenti alone, as if it were tam. For esse cf. 245 note. In Pl. Trin. 131 we find adulescenti animi inpoti, where animi is gen, depending on intoti.

882. me miserum! 'wretch that I am!'

sensti. Cf. 151 note.

883. olim istue, sc. sentire debuisti.

animum induxti tuom. Cf. 151, 572 notes.

887. huius. Simo is so deeply wounded by his son's undutiful conduct that he turns from him in bitter disgust, and speaks of him contemptuously as 'this fellow.' Scan huius as a monosyllable.

890. huius, sc. mei. Cf. 310 note.

892. viceris, 'have your own way.' The future perfect is sometimes used as a virtual imperative. Cf. Adel. 437 ille ad me attinet, quando ita volt frater; de istoc ipse viderit; Liv. 1. 58 vos, inquit, videritis quid illi debeatur; Verg. A. 10. 743 nune morere; ast de me divom pater atque hominum rex Viderit. In this case viceris implies indignant concession; viderit or viderint similarly imply the abandonment of the question in point.

So3. licetne pauca, sc. dicere.

894. tamen, i.e. notwithstanding his unfilial conduct, yet hear him.

895. tandem seems here to be used in the sense of 'pray,' which is so common in interrogations. It might however be taken in the ordinary way, 'at length,' i. e. after all your invective.

896. Notice the change of metre to trochaic tetrameters.

809. adlegatum, 'suborned,' not elsewhere used by Terence. Cf. Pl. Trin, 1142 meo adlegatu venit. Adlegare = to despatch on a private commission, legare on public business.

900. adducas? Cf. 191 note.

- 902. ne, regular after dum, 'provided that.'
- 903. pro peccato magno, 'to expiate a grave fault.'

ACT V. SCENE 4.

Chremes recognises Crito as an old acquaintance. Simo abuses him roundly as an impostor. But when Crito tells his tale it is found that Glycerium is really a daughter of Chremes, by name Pasiphila, who with her uncle Phania had been shipwrecked on the island of Andros when sailing to Asia in quest of Chremes many years back. This brings about a happydinoûment. All parties are reconciled. Pamphilus receives a handsome dowry with his Pasiphila, and even Davos is forgiven.

904. mitte orare. Cf. 827 remittas . . . onerare.

- 905. ipsi Glycerio, dat. commodi after cupio, as after consulo.
- 906. Chremes and Crito had been acquainted in former days.

907. quid tu Athenas, sc. venisti.

evenit, 'accident.' Crito does not choose to tell the real reason at once.

908. hinc civem. Cf. 833.

909. itane hue paratus. Cf. Phor. 427 itane es paratus facere me advorsum omnia?

910. tune . . . haec facias? 'are you to do this?'

911. eductos. Cf. 274 note.

912. laetas. Cf. 648 note.

914. substet, 'hold his own;' ἄπαξ λεγόμενον in this sense.

noris . . . arbitrere. We should have expected the imperfect subjunctive. Cf. 310, 793 note; Mad. § 347, obs. 1.

915. hie vir sit bonus? 'he an honourable man?' Sit is in the subjunctive, because the words are in a quotation. Cf 191 note.

916. itane. Cf. 492.

adtemperate, 'opportunely,' ἄποξ λεγόμενον.

918. haboo. The pres. indic. standing as apodosis of ni metuam expresses the fact that Pamphilus has some advice to give and would give it but for his fear of Simo.

919. sycophanta. Cf. 815 note.

sic est hic, 'that is his way,' i.e. to use strong language and fly into a passion. Cf. Phor. 527 sic sum; si flacco, uterc.

mitte, 'don't mind him.'

videat qui siet, 'let him see to his way.' For siet, cf. 234 note.

921. 'Do I meddle with or care about your concerns?'

922. dieo . . . audierim. This is the reading of A, and means, 'For now it can be known whether I have heard truly or falsely what I say.' The other MSS. read dixi...audieris, 'whether you have heard truly or falsely what I said.' Cf. 908.

924. adplicat . . . se, i. e. as a client to a patron. Cf. 193, 997 for the same phrase.

et istaec una parva virgo, 'and with him that very woman, then a little girl.'

925. fabulam inceptat, 'a pretty tale he is beginning.' Cf. 747 note.

926. tum = Gr. $\epsilon i \tau a$, 'moreover.'

928. nomen tam cito tibi? sc. dicam. Crito does not at the moment remember the name.

930. Rhamnusium. Rhamnus was an Attic deme lying on the eastern coast, about five miles from Marathon. It contained a fortress of some importance, and a celebrated temple of Nemesis, who was sometimes called Rhamnusia virgo. The orator Antipho was born there.

aiebat. Cf. 38 note.

932. quid eam tum? sc. esse aibat.

quoiam. Cf. 763 note.

934. qui, 'on what grounds?'

noram et scio, 'I knew him and can vouch for it.'

936. post illa, or fostilla=fostca, occurs rarely and only in ante-Augustan writers. Cf. Phor. 347, 1018.

937. quid illo sit factum. Cf. 614 note.

939. ne. Cf. 324 note.

940-1. scrupulus, lit. 'a small pointed stone,' hence, 'anxiety, doubt, uneasiness.' Cf. Phor. 1019, Adel. 228 inieci scrupulum homini. A neuter form scrupulum or scripulum is used as the smallest division of weight, $\frac{1}{n-1}$ of an ounce.

dignus es eum tua religione, odium. This is the reading of A, C, P, and it was accepted by Donatus: other MSS. read odio. If odium be correct, an aposiopesis may be understood and odium taken as a vocative = odiose homo, 'you wretch, you deserve . . .' Odium, like scelus, is used in this sense by Plautus, Terence, and Cicero, e.g. Cic. Phil. 14. 3. 8 Antonius, insigne odium omnium hominum vel deorum.

cum tua religione = 'with your scruples.'

nodum in scirpo quaeris, lit. 'you are looking for a knot in a bulrush,' i. e. you are trying to find a difficulty where there is none. The proverb is also found in Pl. Men. 2. 1. 22, Ennius ap. Fest. p. 330, 7.

943. id quaero, 'I am trying to remember it.' Crito's difficulty in recalling names, cf. 928, is a happy touch of nature.

945. Pasiphilast. The MSS reading $Pasib\bar{u}last$ is against the metre, while the dramatic propriety of making $\Pi \dot{a} \mu + \phi \iota \lambda os$ and $\Pi a \sigma \iota - \phi \iota \lambda \eta$ fall in love would be almost sufficient justification in itself for Fleckeisen's emendation, which has been adopted in the text.

947. te credo credere. For a similar expression cf. 958.

948. redduxit. Translate 'the event itself has reconciled me.'

dudum. Cf. 582 note.

- o lepidum patrem, 'O best of fathers.' Lepidus is often used by Plautus and Terence, as applied to persons = 'charming,' to speech = 'smart,' 'clever.' Cf. Adel. 966 o lepidum caput, Pl. Trin. 809 lepidast' illa causa.
 - 950. nempe . . . 'I suppose' . . . seilicet, 'of course.'
- id. Famphilus accompanies the word with a gesture of counting money. Simo and Chremes both understand this at once.

953. non potest, 'impossible.' Cf. 327 note.

954. aliud magis ex sese et maius, 'something else which concerns him more nearly, and is of greater importance to him.'

955. non reete. An instance of $d\mu\rho\iota\beta$ oλία or play upon words. Pamphilus means 'not justly,' Simo chooses to take it as 'not upright.' Cf. 865.

ACT V. SCENE 5.

Charinus overhears Pamphilus philosophising on his good-fortune, and cannot make out what has happened.

957. proviso, 'I am coming out to see.'

eccum. Cf. 532 note.

958. The sense is, 'some people might suppose this too good to believe, but I want to believe it' (and so I do).

959. eapropter is also used by Lucretius.

960. propriae. Cf. 716 note.

961. aegritudo, 'vexation.'

964. A notable instance of alliteration.

solide, cf. 647 note.

gaudia is a cognate accusative after gavisurum. Cf. 362.

ACT V. SCENE 6.

Davos appears, very sore from his punishment, but is pleased to hear how well matters have turned out. Pamphilus promises to use his influence with Chremes on behalf of Charinus, and both go into Glycerium's house, where, as Davos assures the audience, everything that remains will be done in proper form.

In the false ending Chremes promises Philumena to the faithful Charinus with a dowry of six talents.

967. et quidem ego, sc. scio.

more hominum, 'as usual;' cf. Pl. Trin. 1031 seqq.

sum nanctus. The MSS, have sim; but the difficulty of sim is so great and the alteration to sum so slight that we have followed the example of most editors in adopting the latter.

970. pater, sc. of Glycerium.

972. solus est quem diligant di. Bentley against all the MSS. reads solus es quem diligunt di, cf. Phor. 854 nam sine controversia ab dis solus diligere, Antipho. Others, reading est, suppose that Davos thus intimates that the child has died. But such hypotheses are quite unnecessary. What more natural than that Davos should flatter his young master by an extravagant compliment on his infant son and heir? And the congratulation was not without reason. A match, against a father's will, with an unknown and almost penniless girl, was likely enough to have brought both Pamphilus and his family to ruin. Now his son would have an acknowledged and honourable position, with the prospect of a handsome property. Translate, 'he is to be the only favourite of the gods.' The way in which Davos cuts short his young master's threatened rhapsody on the baby is characteristic enough.

974. in tempore ipso. Cf. 532 note.

mi. It is better to consider mi as a dat. commodi, 'at the very nick of time for me,' rather than as after advenis. No certain instance of a dative after advenia occurs in a classical author

977. atque adeo. Cf. 532 note.

980. intus despondebitur, 'the betrothal (of Charinus and Philumena) will take place within.' The Cistellaria and Casina of Plautus end in a similar way.

981. plaudite. Between the first and second acts of a Roman comedy it was the custom to introduce a lyrical monologue (canticum) with a flute accompaniment. Sometimes, as in the Trinummus, this canticum was made an integral part of the play, but more commonly it was performed by a cantor, who also came forward at the end of a play and said to the audience 'plaudite;' cf. Hor. A. P. 155 donec cantor 'vos plaudite' dicat. In all Terence's plays the MSS, mark the cantor by Ω . The actors are often indicated by letters of the Greek alphabet; the cantor, therefore, who appeared at the end of all, is indicated by the last letter.

ALTER EXITUS.

In a few of the later MSS, a second ending, twenty-one lines in length, is found. This ending was known to Donatus and Engraphius, and is certainly of considerable antiquity. Wagner thinks it possible that it may have been the original ending, but that Terence afterwards altered it on finding that the audience showed little interest in the fortunes of Charinus. It seems however far more likely to have been the addition of some later critic who thought the play incomplete without a definite settlement of the second pair of lovers. There are considerable corruptions and omissions in the text; the language in more than one place is involved and obscure, though Ritschl, whose emendations have been generally adopted, has spent on the elucidation of this passage more trouble than perhaps it deserves.

(977-8). Ritschl suggested these lines as a connecting link.

983. alterae for alterius. A dat. fem. sing. alterae is found Haut. 271: cf. 608 note.

985. sors tollitur, 'the lot is being drawn.'

986. 'The match to which you refer is not new to me:' i.e. Chremes had known that Charinus wished to marry Philumena, but had entertained other designs for her.

989-90. 'But I was anxious that our friendship, which has been handed down to us by our fathers, should undiminished be handed on to our children.'

amicitia nostra = friendship of Chremes and Simo. The text as it stands is an anacoluthon, amicitia being a Nominativus pendens. We should have expected amicitiam nostram . . . nulla parte abducta.

992. detur, sc. Philumena Charino.

994-7. These lines are very corrupt. If Ritschl's emendations be adopted the sense may be as follows: 'What shall I say? For to have found you as well disposed towards me as before, gives me no less pleasure than now to obtain what I seek from you.' It is hard to believe that a passage so awkward and involved came from the pen of Terence.

997-8. 'When you, sc. Charinus, have devoted yourself to him, sc. Chremes, as henceforth will be your aim, do you form your opinion.'

999. alienus, 'estranged,' sc. owing to the matrimonial schemes of Chremes.

1000. 'You may guess that to be true from my case,' i.e. Chremes knew only too much about him and his doings.

INDEX TO NOTES.

(References are to the number of the lines. Words distinguished by an asterisk are āπaξ λεγόμενα. Words enclosed in brackets are emendations, or of doubtful authority. When the same word has been noted more than once, but in different case, person, tense, etc., the references will be found under the form which occurs first.)
